Being a Map of MIDDLEBURY and places where...
As in all walks of life people take for granted everyday events, pass over happenings as inconsequential — so, too, in college we often neglect to look around us, to take notice of the simple things which help make our life at Middlebury so memorable. . . . The friends we make, and are with for but four short years, the courses, and the professors who become individuals with their own distinctive characteristics. Too often in our hurry we overlook the beauty of the Vermont countryside and the campus and fail to enjoy the peace it offers — an opportunity we will not often have in our future lives.

We want to remember our environment at Middlebury as well as the current issues of importance before the various student groups and governing bodies, the undertakings of the many campus organizations, the events, educational and extracurricular, of the school year. To further appreciate and remember these features — these four years at Middlebury — our book is written.
DEDICATION

Dean and Mrs. W. Storrs Lee
In a beautiful log cabin about a mile west of the college live two people who represent the best in Middlebury College, Dean and Mrs. W. Storrs Lee.

Dean Lee needs no introduction to the men of the college. As Dean of Men, he is widely known and liked for his great understanding and competence in dealing with student problems. Dean Lee was best known to the entire student body this year for his talks in chapel on the past Presidents of Middlebury. He is author of the book Father Went to College, a history of Middlebury and he is probably the greatest authority on the history of the college.

Mrs. Lee, complementing her husband, is known to the entire women's college for she instructs freshmen and sophomores in modern dance and most sophomores in tennis. She is a warm, pleasant, and extremely well liked member of Middlebury's faculty.

Mrs. Lee has also found time to raise two children and to take care of their home, which she and her husband have built physically as well as spiritually.

Dean and Mrs. Lee are two of the finest people the student comes to know at Middlebury.

twenty years hence, all our memories of Middlebury will probably be a Kaleidoscopic haze of impressions, but certain things will stand out vividly whenever we think of the year 1950-51: Freshman week, our 150th anniversary celebration, the tragedy of the Thanksgiving weekend storm, the twentieth Winter Carnival, Junior Weekend, and finally . . . Commencement.
Student Life
"I have just been accepted at Middlebury," the young erudite joyously shrieks. From this moment on, life becomes an endless stream of questionnaires, forms to fill out, and life histories.

Time flies and it is September 17th. The newcomer is plentifully equipped with useful things for college. White bucks, a brand new Ford convertible, much beer money, and a raccoon coat will pull the eager freshman man through his first semester at Middlebury. After that he may find it necessary to be less eager.

The freshman woman will need a yellow slicker, knitting needles (plus skill in turning out ski sweaters without puffed sleeves), trunks full of bobby socks, also vitamin pills, a year’s supply of instant coffee, and countless weeks of practice in perfecting her pronunciation of “hi.”

Roommate’s first words, “From now on what’s yours is mine” may prove disheartening. After a few days of tests, meetings, registrations, and the psychological exam, the freshman is happily psycho. He knows where the cemetery is located, just how far you can see from the lookout tower on Chipman Hill, and perhaps has discovered “Passion Puddle.”

Most freshmen go on the first Mountain Club hike. We also know of one who recuperated in sufficient time to go on the second. Then there is Freshman Dance . . . however, the lighting effects usually make it impossible to recognize anyone, the crowded effect usually makes it impossible to move, and the ultimate effect is that the freshman spends the evening wondering what is meant by “dancing” in this fabulous state of confusion—that is Vermont.

Freshman year would not be the same were it not for freshman beanies and name tags. Many freshmen would disagree, but name tags are actually an overt expression by the upperclassmen of that deep feeling Midd wants to instill in all freshmen, the feeling of belonging. Dogs also wear them.

In conclusion, senior year, junior year, and sophomore year are the three best years of our lives, save one—you guessed it—freshman year.

FRESHMEN
Concerts - Lectures

Every so often Middlebury students are treated to one of those rare whiffs of not-quite-academic fragrance, which are destined to remain with them long after the essence of most classroom lectures has "bitten the dust." This year the traditional Concert-Lecture Series contributed along these lines by presenting Cornelia Otis Skinner, the Vermont State Symphony Orchestra, Sanroma, and Charles Weidman with his Theatre Dance Company. In addition to these events there were at least two others of equal interest, namely: lectures by Mrs. Induk Pahk and Doctor Henry S. Commager.

Mrs. Pahk, a native of Korea, presented her own pertinent description of that country and its people. Stressing Korea's vast cultural background, Mrs. Pahk made the point that Koreans live too much in the past, and that with unity of North and South will come "spiritual, moral, and political strength."

Miss Skinner captured and retained the attention of all with a magnificent portrayal of the six wives of Henry VIII and the enactment of a few modern monologues of Americans in France.

On December 7th, the Vermont Symphony Orchestra delighted its audience with its much-awaited annual program. Maurice Wilk, the outstanding violinist, performed a solo, while Mr. Alan Carter conducted.

With a few well-chosen words, Henry Steele Commager managed to arouse in his audience a bit of that now smouldered fire and fury which characterized the Civil War period. Dr. Commager's subject was "Literature of the Civil War."

States the San Francisco Chronicle in reference to Sanroma, "One of the greatest pianists in America." The musician's audience in Middlebury apparently was similarly impressed.

The lighter vein was to be found in Charles Weidman's dance recital. Endowed with the ability to express his humorous observations through the medium of dance, Mr. Weidman was very clever in his interpretations. Perhaps his recital even inspired a few placid individuals to let go and express themselves by joining the Modern Dance Club here at college.
Sesquicentennial Weekend

After one hundred and fifty years of liberal education, anyone would feel like celebrating! That is just what we did on the weekend of September twenty-ninth and thirtieth. Middlebury welcomed a record number of old graduates, friends, and parents; also sixty-two delegates, fifty-five of which represented various colleges and universities throughout the country. President Truman extended his congratulations. What was the occasion? A birthday party, of course, and the annual Homecoming Weekend thrown in to boot.

The two day Sesquicentennial Anniversary began on Friday morning in the Congregational Church, when Dr. Thomas (past president of Middlebury), Dr. Freeman, and President Stratton spoke, and by Friday afternoon it had really made the rounds. From the church it had proceeded to the Inn (for registrations), to Old Chapel (for an informal reception), and ended at Mead Chapel for a twilight musicale by the college choir.

Friday evening the Symposium... “The Liberal Arts College... Its Heritage and Prospects”... claimed the presence of many of the delegates. A few old grads were viewed “cutting” and heading in the direction of Passion Puddle. Probably these had been former biology majors; the frog population of this puddle being well known. The above mentioned romanticists, however, missed an excellent program. Speaking were Dr. Charles Seymour, President Emeritus of...
Midd's Dick Worthington stopped by a Wesleyan tackler

Yale University; Dr. Oliver Carmichael, President of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Learning; Mildred MacAfee Horton, former President of Wellesley College; and Dr. Henry M. Wriston, President of Brown University.

Saturday morning, sunny, bright, and rather early, the Ted Lang Jr. Memorial Field, to be used for intramural sports, was dedicated. Later in the morning could be seen one of the most impressive features of the weekend... the procession of delegates, trustees, faculty members and students to the Memorial Field House. College men, looking very fine in their Saturday best, were complemented by college women in white, and both formed an aisle in front of the Field House through which marched the remainder of the procession.

The proceedings within the Field House vied with, and defeated, those without for precedence. "The Idea and the Hour," a poem written expressly for this occasion, was read by its author, Arthur Wallace, '09, to commence the Convocation which was ended by the presentation of honorary degrees to five of our outstanding guests. The interim between the presentation of the poetry and the degrees was emblazoned by Philip C. Jessup, United States Ambassador-at-Large. Ambassador Jessup's speech, entitled "Let Freedom Ring," invoked spontaneous applause from an appreciative audience.

A tie-score football game with Wesleyan and the Commodore's Ball completed the weekend. A most successful birthday party.

On November 25th, 1950, Middlebury and the surrounding area from Rutland to Burlington suffered a repetition of the disastrous 1938 hurricane as driving winds battered the countryside for ten hours in an unceasing attack.

This most destructive storm in the history of Middlebury College did fully $100,000 damage to the school property. Every building on campus was damaged with the Memorial Field House, Mead Chapel, Pearsons Hall and the Student Union building suffering the heaviest losses.

In addition to the physical plant the life of the college was thrown out of gear for at least a week. The storm was on Saturday night. For Sunday and most of Monday the campus was without electricity. This meant makeshift meals in the dining halls and candles at night. Some buildings like Painter and Pearsons were without lights for a period of five days.

The Memorial Field House, barely two years old, suffered damages estimated at 50,000 dollars. The winds, sweeping across the athletic fields, completely blew off the flat section of the roof which extends the length of the building, exposing the hockey rink, the locker rooms, the basketball floors and the exercise room to the heavy rains. The main worry was the basketball floor which was likely to warp from the soaking. However, by covering the floor with sawdust and working at top speed to get the roof back on, the floor was saved and the gym opened a short while after the Christmas holidays.

The chapel suffered extensive damage to windows, its spire, and the roof. Two large cement urns on the steeple were blown off and down through the roof, one landing in the balcony of the building. The top of the steeple was blown loose although it still remained attached. As a result of the damage, and not altogether against the will of the students, compulsory chapel was called off until the end of the semester.

In Pearsons dormitory water damage forced the removal of the occupants until the walls and ceilings could be repaired. The Student Union building, in danger of collapse, had to be closed for a week.

Fraternity houses were hit, the most extreme case being the Alpha Sigma Psi house which lost its roof.

While the college was digging itself out, the town and surrounding area of Middlebury was in an even more difficult plight.

Hardest hit were the farmers whose cows had, in many cases, been trapped under fallen barns.

The first response of the college to the plight of the town came during the height of the storm when a group of students volunteered their services at Porter Hospital to help in moving patients from danger spots.
Damage to the jump, digging cows from a collapsed barn, tractors clearing blocked Washington Street just beyond the Inn, students clearing debris on campus, President Stratton's uprooted tree and upturned sidewalk, and a tree resting on a house on the west side of North Pleasant Street
Students helped police and officials directing traffic during the storm in the downtown area.

The real job came on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday after the storm when organized teams of students, working through the dean’s office and with the cooperation of the state police, went out to the surrounding districts to aid the crippled farmers. Freed from classes for two days the college helped in baling hay, digging out cattle, repairing roofs of houses and barns and general attempts at cleaning things up.

At the College Snow Bowl damage was confined to a large number of fallen trees (thirty-eight came down over the downhill trail) and to the tow which was put out of commission. College crews, working Sunday and Monday, cleared the debris and repaired the lift.

Thursday, classes began and affairs began to approach the normal stage. There was still no electricity in some buildings, the trees were still littering the campus and many students were still out working on the farms.

However, the Campus newspaper managed to come out on schedule with complete coverage of the storm, and within the week all activities were in full swing.

President Stratton voiced his appreciation for the efforts of the College students in the emergency as did the officials of the town.

Winter

The 1951 Middlebury Winter Carnival, Middlebury's 20th, meant months of preparation by the whole student body under the able direction of Don Lelong and Polly Norton, Carnival co-chairmen. Although there was no ice during Carnival until Saturday, prayers for snow were rewarded with excellent skiing conditions at Bread loaf. Officially beginning with the women's ski events on Thursday afternoon, Carnival went into the full swing of festivities Thursday night with the coronation of Queen Margy Packard, captain of the women's ski team, and King Tom Jacobs, captain of the men's ski team. Due to the lack of ice the coronation was held in Chapel.

Later in the evening Jim Van Wart, instructor in speech and drama, directed the College Players in the hilarious English comedy, "See How They Run." The antics of leads Sarah Pettibone, Jim Straney, and Rod Griffis, as they tried to solve one case of mistaken identity after another, successfully got everyone in a mood of holiday gaiety. Sarah, as Penelope Toop, finds her peaceful life interrupted by Jim Straney, as the handsome actor Clive who had toured with her on a USO circuit. The play was fast-moving and funny. After much confusion, all problems were resolved and the play ended on a note setting the tone for the rest of the Carnival festivities.

Friday Carnival-goers were treated to a variety of activities—ski events, a musicale instead of the hockey game with Dartmouth, and the Carnival Ball. At night Midd went formal for the Ball—everyone very elegant in tuxedos and evening gowns. Dim lights, a woody background of pine trees and a mountain cabin, and the danceable music of the Yale Collegians provided just the right atmosphere. Highlights were the Ravens, whose Pepsodent smiles and close harmony added to intermission entertainment.

The Ice Show (postponed from Thursday night) and the Klondike Rush finished up the parties with a bang. Undoubtedly the most beautiful single event of Carnival, the Ice Show combined brilliant costumes, skillfully used colored lights, and the graceful movements of trained skaters. Featured soloists were Nancy Berquist, Wally Miner, and Mr. William Sommers. Bill Smith, a former student, and Naval Airman Dick La Fontaine, performing with a broken skate, were outstanding guest stars.

The Klondike Rush really lived up to its name this year, from the huge prospector in the middle of the floor to the corral entrance and refreshment chuck wagon. Couples in ski pants and stocking feet danced to the long, loud music of the Dartmouth Green Collegians. Those who were too tired to dance joined in singing Mountain Club songs and "Alouette." Others sat on the floor listening to the Alpha Sigma Psi Octet and the monologues of Don (last Mohican) Peach.

Sunday morning the jump, postponed from the previous day because of severe cross winds, was held, winding up the ski events. When the results were in, the Middlebury women's ski team was found to be in first place and the men's team in 2nd place, 19.3 points behind Dartmouth. Ski-meister awards went to Frieda Opdahl of the University of New Hampshire and Verne Goodwin of Middlebury.

In spite of setbacks in the weather, Midd's 20th Carnival turned out to be one of the best, thanks to the effort and enthusiasm of all concerned and that indefinable something called Carnival spirit.

Middlebury Conference

Freedom in an Age of Science was the topic of the 1950 Conference—Midd’s eighth.

As President Stratton claimed in the introductory address on Saturday, April 22, the fear that in an age of science we are “losing the freedom and dignity of the individual” was implicit in the conference topic, and the concern was further elaborated upon by the nine participants in the Conference.

1950 CONFERENCE SPEAKERS

| Paul Appleby | George Santillana |
| Zechariah Chaffee | Noel Sargent |
| Alfred Coulthard | Ruth Seabury |
| Bartlett Hayes | David Thomson |
| Charles Rogers |

Dr. David Thomson, dean of graduate students and research at McGill University, started the cultural panel by attempting to define Freedom and Science. Dr. Thomson expressed the chief objective of science as human welfare—in terms of freedom: freedom from disease, starvation, and ignorance.

Freedom for Miss Ruth Seabury, missionary teacher and religious adviser, was an ability to keep the spirit free, rather than a physical or a social freedom. Bartlett Hayes, director of the Addison Gallery of American Art, saw in the recent urging for governmental control of art, for instance, a danger that not only the procedure but the substance of creative art be controlled.

The economic panel on Saturday afternoon opened with Alfred Coulthard, labor relations expert, who pleaded for “free understanding and Christian ethics” on the part of members of business and labor groups. Noel Sargent, NAM secretary, stated that close cooperation of science and free enterprise offers us a great hope for the future. George Santillana of MIT stated that... today's science is being perverted in the sense that it is being used to seek technology rather than knowledge.

A banquet for the speakers and committee members was held on Saturday evening, and was followed by an informal reception in Forest Rec. which enabled students to meet and ask questions of the speakers.

Dean Paul Appleby of the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs in Syracuse, N. Y., speaking on the political panel on Sunday morning, asserted that science has given a grave complexity to the modern world. The division of labor, according to Appleby, and its consequent specialization have tended to split the individual and make social contact difficult and sometimes impossible. Dr. Charles E. Rogers of the FAO of the United Nations, stressed the fact that science is equivalent with freedom, in that it is the free pursuit of knowledge, but in our preoccupation with "gadgetry" we have left science by the wayside and swerved from the essentials of freedom.

Moderator Zechariah Chaffee, making the summary address at the Sunday afternoon panel, ended his talk with a provocative quotation, "You Americans have so much," said an Indian philosopher, "but what are you going to do with it?"

Some of the noted speakers who gathered at the 1951 Conference to explore the theme, "The American Response to World Crisis" were newspaperman Ira Wolfert, William Shirer, commentator, Foster R. Dulles, writer and professor of history at Ohio State University, Edwin Nourse, former Chairman of Truman's Economic Advisory Board, and Francis B. Sayre, professor and diplomat.
Casual pictures of life at Middlebury could be duplicated on any college campus. Mountain Club hikes (wonderful chances for pictures), dorm flashes ("Eek, look at me! You didn’t tell us you were going to take it"), campus couples (Will they be going together twenty years from now?) and laundry cases being tooted down town. If you’re not here, you’re represented.

These are the scenes which never make the headlines, but they stand for memories that mellow with age, and over the years they will be enveloped in a rosy glow.

Every Midd student eagerly awaits the coming spring, not only because human as well as plant life is literally rejuvenated here on campus, but also because analogous with thoughts of spring are thoughts of Junior Weekend—three fun and laughter-filled days.

In the weekend of 1950 the laughter first started on Thursday night at the rally in McCullough Gym, with Don McLean and Bard Lindeman as masters of uncereemonious ceremonies. After these two sedate gentlemen presented the entertainment, which included Dick Godfrey doing a take-off on his illustrious parent, and some riotous juggling acts and songs, the rally came to a close with Ralph Loveys presenting to the crowd the eleven lovely, fraternity-sponsored candidates for queen of the weekend: Meg Curry, C.P.; Marilyn Murphy, ATO; Carol Heinze, DU; Jo Faucher, PKT; Ellen Hight, KDR; Jane Hyde, ASP; Jane Walker, S.P.E.; Nat Child and Gail Haskins, neutral; Mary Hench, DKE; and Joan Macklaier, T.C.

Friday afternoon the Midd baseball team, in the spirit of the weekend, trounced Lowell Textile 4-0.

Mary-Lou Wiley and Bud Rannenberg with their committee members dreamed up the prom—a Dutch garden complete with tulips, a revolving windmill, Hal Reeves and his orchestra and queen Janie Walker.

On Saturday afternoon the slightly soiled sophomore men climbed from Porter Pond after being defeated by the freshman men in a tug-o'-war. Bedlam reigned at the baseball game between the Roman senators (Junior men) and the Birdie Cardinals.
Weekend

(Junior women). Professors Valentine and Stenson, who served as umpires, were confused about the outcome of the game, although the rules specify the Cardinals must win, as the Senators' infield, clad in togas of ancient vintage, was slightly hampered by a clothesline binding it together.

Lin Meacham, Gret Deckelman, Brig Elliott, and Jim Jacober, together with a star-studded cast of over 100, combined their talents to present the Variety Show on Saturday night. This included the Theta Chi Octet's interpretation of "The Sow Song" and Lou Imbrogno and Jan Bogart's rendition of "I'm Just a Fool About Love." And people will be talking about the three Andrews sisters (alias Dusty Kinnard, Hal Leclair, and Giff Eager) for a long time to come.

The weather, which had seemed to be in complete harmony with the gaiety of the weekend, suddenly changed on Sunday afternoon to force the step-singing competition inside chapel. All four classes, both men and women, rose separately and made their way to the chancel where the originality and presentation of their songs won the Senior women, under the direction of Barb Ferris, first place. The Sophomore men, under Phil Barton, with their irreverent but highly entertaining ditties, won first place in the men's division. Honorable mention went to Sophomore women directed by Lorna Bowby, and to the Junior men under the direction of Roly Coates.

Di Stoddard and Ralph Loveys, co-chairmen of the weekend, did more than their share towards making Junior Weekend an event we'll always remember when we think of Midd and the spring of 1950.
At the first measures of Pomp and Circumstance the long line of robed professors begins the march into the Field House. For four years we have sat before these men and women, absorbing, assimilating, questioning all that they have taught us. Now they are hopefully dismissing us into the world.

The marshals lead the solemn procession of seniors—alphabetically arranged for the last time. Women sit on one side, men on the other, reminiscent of chapel days and of the classes of a few old-guard professors.

An invocation—President Stratton rises to speak. The dapper mustache, the ubiquitous horn-rimmed glasses—we remember his welcoming address to us as freshmen, his wife's teas—it's impossible to believe this is our last hour as Middlebury undergraduates. Suddenly we are jolted out of our collective reverie. The familiar list of our names is being read. We file up to the platform, and come down again as Middlebury graduates. We shift our tassels together, symbolizing our status as alumni.

Settling back, we struggle to listen to the speakers, to concentrate upon every word of their advice, but our minds stray to thoughts of our four years here at Midd—of our attachments to people and places—bull sessions in the Pine Room . . . studying on the grass in springtime . . . picnics at Dunmore . . . wistful dogs at the Snack Bar . . . the musty smell of the library stacks. The audience is warm and restless as the June sunshine streams through the huge Field House windows.

The honorary degrees are given, and we leave the Field House, each of us the proud possessor of a Bachelor of Arts degree. The world is our oyster—we keep telling ourselves. So long, Midd!

Juniors receive the canes from the graduating class
fter leaving Middlebury we’ll remember the library—digging up research from the musty stacks, tripping over Boswell on the front steps.

We’ll remember our exacting profs, the reams of note paper we’ve covered, and the blue books. We’ve realized the importance of learning.
President
Samuel S. Stratton

President Samuel S. Stratton—a man known to the entire campus. We have seen him this year participating in our 150th anniversary celebration, at football games, inspecting a slightly damaged college early the morning after the big storm and at teas. We have seen him in chapel and officiating at various ceremonies.

We know of his attempts to acquire an R.O.T.C. unit for Middlebury, and his success in setting the college on a more substantial financial footing.

We have seen the college expand a great deal during his reign as President. When he took office in 1943 there was no Student Union Building, no North or South Battell, no Carr Hall, no Memorial Field House. The college has also grown in other ways under his direction, expanding its faculty and curriculum. The students appreciate the capable President of Middlebury College.

Vice President
Stephen A. Freeman

Dr. Stephen A. Freeman, Vice-President of Middlebury College, in charge of the Summer Schools, head of the French department, is a man with many positions fulfilled well.

As students we see him in chapel where he speaks with a loud, extremely clear voice which gives the listener a feeling of sincerity. We are proud of the international reputation of the French language school here which he has been largely responsible for developing.

His numerous and varied accomplishments make Dr. Stephen Freeman a true leader of Middlebury College.
Dean Lee, whose office is always open to the college student, has long been known for his great insight into the problems of life and for having a competent and efficient office staff which this year is made up of Miss Isabel Sherwood and Fred Neuberger, ’50.

Mrs. Elizabeth Baker Kelly acts in the capacity of Dean of Women and as Social Director for the college and thus comes into contact with members of both the men’s and women’s college. Her efforts in looking out for the welfare of the college and the fact that she is more concerned with the spirit of the rules than with the letter makes her a real asset to Middlebury College.

Dean Raymond H. White is best known to the student in his capacity as chief adviser during registration periods when his approval is needed for so many requests. At other times the student body comes in contact with him in his classics classes and hears of him in his capacity as Dean of the Faculty.

American Literature

The Am. Lit. major struggles through the survey course, which is designed for the survival of the fittest, then goes on to higher things—poetry, short story, research, biography. By the time three years have passed, the Am. Lit. major has delved into the background and personnel of American letters from Jonathan Edwards to Ernest Hemingway.

Howard Munford—of the dry, often scathing humor, white bucks, and talent for never giving pat answers, but with his provocative counter questions making his students think for themselves; and Charles Sanford—new this year, an alumnus of Midd and the Air Corps, noted for his reserved and quietly forceful personality. These men hold a demanding job, since nearly every Midd student considers his education incomplete without at least one course in Am. Lit.

English and Drama

Midd's English Department is particularly well supplied with qualified and able men. Douglas S. Beers, with his stock of amusing anecdotes; Lockwood Merriman, never seen without a bow tie; Henry Prickitt, young Navy veteran; intellectual Baird Whitlock, with his Rutgers banner and ubiquitous tea cup; Donald Purcell, novelist in his spare time, and former lumberman.

Perley Perkins, often heard philosophizing on his debaters; Erie Volkert, usually busy at the playhouse, but saving energies for his drama classes; benign Frank Cady, portrayer of Shakespeare's characters; Walter Savage, working to improve faculty grammar; and Midd graduate James Van Wart, surrounded in speech class by his boys, the D.U.s.
Fine Arts

With the confidential suggestion to wait until you have reached a higher level of maturity, Mr. Healy and the Fine Arts Department enter your life. Well qualified to be head of the department, Arthur Healy’s work can be spotted all over campus.

Practical art may interest the person who really has not a bit of talent, yet soon finds he begins to create good likenesses of the bathing suit clad models, under the good-natured direction of Peter Walton, the perennial “man of distinction.” Mary Lee teaches the history and application of the dance. Those who graduate as Fine Arts majors attain a deep appreciation and a broader knowledge of the world of art.

Music

Hearing the strains of a Brahms’ composition, the Midd grad recalls nostalgically that year spent with Mr. Carter and Music Survey. Alan Carter develops in his students an appreciation for music, and an insight into the lives of the musicians of “his orchestra,” the Vermont Symphony. “Let’s make joyful noises” reminds us of the college choir, directed by Ward Bedford, a perfectionist who puts great stock in tuning-up and chest exercises.

“Madame Bussey” wins the hearts of all those with whom she comes in contact, by her warm understanding and robust sense of humor. Versatile Jean Berger, harmony and piano teacher, and famed modern composer, has the enviable virtue of great patience, capable of putting students at complete ease. Those looking for a liberal education find one in Music alone.
Philosophy

Aristotle, Santayana, Descartes — to the philosophy major these names have important significance, for he is aware of the influences these men have exerted upon our thoughts.

John Andrews, the head of the department, is a philosopher in the true sense of the word, and chess player extraordinaire! With his sense of humor, adaptability, and unusual insight into human nature, the abstract material becomes comprehensible and concrete. Individualistic and athletic Sten Stenson, warns his students against becoming smothered in a "pudding of respectability," and succeeds in astounding and confounding them with his vast vocabulary. Through the efforts of these fine men the department has achieved a position of prominence in the college curriculum.

Religion

Buddhism, Jainism, Hinduism, Taoism, Christianity — these and other basic religions are offered in Midd's religion department. Chaplain Johnson, familiar to all of us in daily chapel and as a counselor to the college community, with his sense of humor and interesting side notes, greatly broadens the student's religious knowledge.

Walter Clark treats a different side of religion in his unusual course in the psychology of religion, as an influence on personality development. Field trips, such as the visit to a Jewish synagogue, provide scope for class discussion and a greater understanding and tolerance of different religious faiths.
The Classics

Although student interest in the Classics has declined a great deal since the founding of Middlebury, the importance of the ancient civilizations and their enormous influence on the world today should not be forgotten. Those students who study the classics under Raymond White are well aware of the rich store of Greek and Roman knowledge from which we constantly draw.

Professor White, Dean of the Faculty, succeeds in imparting to his students some of his deep appreciation of both Greek and Roman culture. His little sketches of the old days at Midd, the personal instruction, and remarkable correlation with the present, succeed in making these "dead" languages extremely "living." This, plus his affinity for plaid ties and constant hunting for references, has endeared him to all who pass through the portals of the past.

French

Voila! The Chateau, set back from the main campus, truly seems like a picture straight from France. Even upon entering the building, it's hard to dispel the sensation, as everyone you meet is chattering away "en francais." Headed by energetic, precise Stephen Freeman, Vice-President of the college, head of the French summer school, and Phi Beta Kappa, the department consists of Claude Bourcier, talented piano player, constantly seen with a beret perched on his head; Lea Binand, an ardent movie fan and "blimp" driver; quick Fernand Marty, whose classes are always entertaining and enlightening; and pretty Jeanne M. Huchon, with her loafers, who constantly works at improving her English and her students' French. With such a staff, the French department draws many each year to its rewarding and varied courses.
German

"Sprechen Sie Deutsch?" In all probability "nein." This is a situation that can soon be remedied by enrollment in the German Department.

Herr and Frau Neuse offer courses in basic and scientific German, and more advanced courses in German literature and civilization. Herr Neuse, head of the Summer School German Department, demands the best efforts from his students, and offers them the finest knowledge in return; Frau Neuse, with her amazing patience and cheerful humor, brings a special sparkle to her classes. Besides gaining a view into a different race and culture, it is rich enough reward to be able to answer "ja" when asked, "Sprechen Sie Deutsch?"

Russian

It is doubtful whether, in the next few years, Middlebury will establish a Russian School in Russia, but Midd has the next best thing—Mischa Fayer at Middlebury. Mr. Fayer's classes are conducted in a continual state of suppressed humor that tends to keep the students on their toes. From the moment a student enters the Russian Department, Cupid's Lair,—for Mr. Fayer has such a reputation—until he is finished, he is under personal guidance and supervision. Nor could a student be in better hands, for Mr. Fayer is a gentleman with a tremendous background in both American and Russian life and literature, which he generously imparts to all of his students.
Spanish and Italian

Fiesta, with romance and beautiful senoritas—these are the vivid appeals of the Spanish and Italian departments. An even greater drawing card for the department is its head—Sam Guarnaccia, enjoyed for his small, informal classes, and his humor and sparkle.

While he carries the reins of the Italian division alone, his fellow workers in the Spanish department are vivacious and entertaining: Rose Martin, famed for her readings of "Winnie the Pooh"; Manuel Alvarez-Morales, a native Cuban, who works at cultivating ease in conversational Spanish; and Katherine Centeno, whose experiences with authors make her classes interesting and inspiring.

Contemporary Civilization

A department with which every student on campus is familiar is Contemporary Civilization, better known as "C.C." Required of all students in their freshman year, this course is designed to acquaint the student with the major events and trends of today, giving a background of European history and significant influences emanating from it.

Waldo Heinrichs heads the department, making the theoretical work most enjoyable with his interesting lectures interspersed with personal experiences. Thomas Reynolds leads the weekly discussion groups on current events, and frequently stumps students with his "Is it not?" All agree that C.C. is one course everyone should take, and many students will even pull out their newspapers to prove it.
Many men and women upon graduation from college enter the business world, where they find a background in economics most helpful. Even for a student majoring in another department, a course in this field proves to be of great value in enabling a person to grasp the fundamental economic institutions of the world, which today cannot be ignored by anyone.

Headed by James "Jungle Jim" Prentice, famed for his travels and jokes, the Ec department consists of Middlebury graduate Dave Smith, with his half-whimsical smile and practical illustrations; good-natured Robert Klein, who walks several miles a day in each class; and Canadian George Mowbray, whose humor is the delight of all. These fine economists succeed in making their department one of the most popular at Midd.

While many students are satisfied that they know all history after a year of C.C., majors in the department have discovered rich fields of further study, from the ancient histories of Greece and Rome, to the intellectual and social life of the U. S.

Thorough and effective Allen Cline heads the department; other members—good-natured John "Sleepy" Davison, ardent flower raiser in his spare time; Pardon Tillinghast, conducting intellectual discourses at tremendous speed, interspersed with accounts of hilarious incidents; Raymond White, with his affinity for plaid ties and anecdotes; Stuart Prentice, who treats economic history; and Howard Munford, with his characteristic insight. History is made alive and fascinating by these men.
Political Science

One way to preserve and strengthen our democracy is for every American to have a vital interest and an active part in his government. Here at Midd, the future citizens and leaders of America are being trained in the Political Science department.

Headed by "Lt. Colonel" Walter Bogart, with his insistence on punctuality and bright ties, the staff includes Edward Steele, whose great success as leader of Poly Sci. discussion groups is due to his keen interest and ability to draw students out and make them feel completely at ease; and Harris Thurber, possessor of an amazing memory for names, who returned to Midd in February after a 20 month absence to replace Leonard Hoag, now a special analyst for the Department of State.

Psychology and Education

Prospective students of psychology enter this department with the assurance that in no time they will be qualified psychoanalysts. These idealistic aspirants are soon brought down to earth when they begin their studies.

Consistent and logical John Valentine, never known to be diverted from his subject, and famous for his banjo recital at Hepburn; Linc Hanson, new to Midd, with self-assured vigor leads the discussion sections; Frank Howard, with a fund of jokes, covers his courses with thoroughness; and Walter Clark, noted for his tendency to go off on tangents, and his fascinating talent for hypnotism, who is also busy with his practical education courses. This department is a vital and interesting one to Midd students who realize its importance in daily living.
Sociology

Gestalt, gemeinshaft, demography, neurosis—what is this all about? Just ask A Soc. Major, whose wide variety of courses has made him familiar with these specialized terms.

Russell Sholes, known for his generous allowance of free cuts, and vivid tales of his world travels; and Harold Parker, Midd graduate, and lacrosse coach, an encourager of class discussions and student participation. Supplementary to the theoretical courses are field trips, such as those to the state mental hospital and Windsor Prison, which provide the Soc. major with a practical insight into pertinent social problems.

Biology

A Biology student, according to a reliable lab assistant, is a thing of industry and a myelencelphalon forever. He even proudly pledges his allegiance to Friday afternoon lab sessions.

The popular Biology department is headed by meticulous Harold Hitchcock, particularly renowned for his 6 A.M. bird walks to Porter Puddle via Warner Science, and his "pets," bats included. Handsome Frank Lane, Mr. Hitchcock's able assistant, of Crosley and Lockwood fame, is perhaps the reason why Biology holds such a fascination for the co-eds. We can only say that one's affinity for the Biology building must be undying or it will surely die!!
Chemistry

Light shining from the windows of the chem building late in the evening every night of the week is a common sight on campus, but the "salves" of the test tube do not take their hard work without humor, as may be evidenced by the famed "Blue Derby" tradition of the chem lab.

The Middlebury Chemistry Department is headed by Perley Voter, a great talker who gives a fatherly helping hand to all his students. Assisting him are Grant Harnest, pleasant and friendly, blessed with great understanding; capable, patient Chandler Schmalz; and Arndt Weicksel, new this year. The Chem Department is highly rated, and its students go out into the world well-qualified to further the progress of this rapidly advancing science.

Geology, Geography, Drafting

After struggling through either Chem or Bug class Freshman year, we wonder why we didn't wait until Sophomore year and take Geology, the best out from that required science predicament. This course, along with Geography and Drafting, forms one of Midd's most interesting departments.

Phelps Swett specializes in the graphic language of drafting; Bruno Schmidt, geology professor, who likes to illustrate his subjects in football terminology, gives his all to his work and his students; Rowland Illick, brought up in China and possessing a wide range of experiences, particularly fond of the enigma of geography; and able Phillip Brown, recent Dartmouth graduate, with his rapid talk and unique New England accent. This unusual field of study is one through which we can more completely attain our liberal education.
Home Economics

No woman’s education is complete without at least one course in Home Ec, whether she emerges a master at turning out fluffy muffins, or at burning toast and scrambling fried eggs. Courses in the fine points of cooking, nutrition, sewing, and clothing are valuable for the career woman as well as for the housewife.

Pert, energetic Ida Gibson, head of the department, runs the Homestead as well as giving instruction in foods and nutrition. Cora Mueller, interested in her girls not only as students but as individuals, teaches clothing and textiles, which includes everything from painting a color wheel to decorating the Grey Shop window. So Midd produces not only teachers and scientists, but also the housewives and mothers of tomorrow.

Mathematics

A familiar yet puzzling sight to those passing through the second floor of Munroe at any hour of the day is a roomful of students hard at work over calculating machines. The mystery of just what subject is the object of all this attention is solved when John Bowker is seen sticking his head in the door.

The Math department is headed by brusque, businesslike Mr. Bowker, who always has a moment to give a helping hand. Quick, witty Burt Hazeltine, with his saddle shoes and crew cut, and Donald Ballou, with his subtle sense of humor, and gleam in his eye when a daily quiz is forthcoming, together with Mr. Bowker, succeed in turning out Math majors with an excellent foundation and background in the philosophical as well as the mechanical aspects of mathematics.
Physical Education

Although we have few Physical Ed majors here at Midd, none of us escape its influences. Ask any co-ed who is required to apply her unathletically inclined anatomy to acquiring the skills of squash, hockey, modern dance and the like.

Mary Rosevear, heading the women's department, renowned for her references to "Sadie" during hygiene lectures; Peggy Slevin, a grand sport and enthusiastic sportswoman; and Mary Lee, upholder of the dance.

Several celebrated campus figures compose the men's department—Coach Brown, its head; "Red" Kelly, noted for hiding from his gym classes; "Duke" Nelson, football and hockey coach; Bobo Sheehan; and Dick Ciccolella. These men and women foster the Midd spirit of sportsmanship and teamwork.

Physics

The Physics student enters his first class with trepidation, having heard about Benjamin F. Wissler beforehand. This gentleman is famous for many unorthodox methods of getting his difficult subject across. For example, to demonstrate a principle, he will run right smack into a wall, an immovable force. "What do you mean—the wrong answer?" often catches students unaware, but because of Benny's insistence on a firm grasp of the principles of physics he has gained great admiration and respect. Physics lab is a place which some liberal arts students hope never to see. Michael Glowa, patient yet firm, helps immeasurably in giving students a working knowledge of a subject prominent in today's world.
The Daily Notice, symbol of Midd’s extra-curricular life. Meetings in the North Lounge, headlines to write for the Campus, rehearsals at the Playhouse, Kaleid deadlines to beat.

Sometimes hectic, always rewarding, extra-curricular activities offer us a matchless opportunity to meet people, to learn to work with them, and to gain invaluable experience.
ATTENTION: Lists of students who are expected to receive degrees in June 1951 are posted in the Registrar's Office and in Old Race Hall on the ground floor bulletin board. If any names have been omitted or included in error, please report immediately to the Registrar's office.

A resounding thump on the back, a blue skeleton key hung around his neck, and another Middlebury man becomes a member of Blue Key, the campus honorary society for men.

This impressive ceremony takes place in chapel each spring, when men from the sophomore, junior, and senior classes are tapped by the Blue Key members. The quota for tapping is twenty-five men; usually five seniors, fifteen juniors, and five sophomores are chosen.

One of the main functions of Blue Key is the all-important task of instilling "the old Midd spirit" in the minds of the pea-green freshmen men; the group watches sternly for any violations of the beanie and name-tag laws and makes sure that cheers and songs are learned and put to use.

Upon occasion, Blue Key resorts to disciplinary measures. In the fall a goodly number of freshmen unwisely failed to turn out for a pep rally, so Blue Key routed them out of their rooms near the witching hour, and an impromptu rally was held. After this episode, all rallies were well attended.

Blue Key is also known for its publication of the football programs, and for its role as gracious host to visiting athletic teams.

Each spring Blue Key presents a trophy to the outstanding freshman man who possesses the qualities of leadership, athletic ability, and services rendered to Middlebury—the ideals of Blue Key.

The spring air is electric with rumors and speculation as the day of tapping draws near—the day when two senior members step up to a junior girl, help her don the black cap and gown of Mortar Board, and lead her to the front of the chapel to join the other members of the national honorary society for senior women. The excitement, the white dresses, the gold and silver ribbons worn the rest of the day, only begin to suggest the importance that is attached to the honor of becoming a Mortar Board member.

These five members are the Middlebury women personified, possessing qualities of leadership, scholarship, and service to the college which are the necessary prerequisites to becoming a Mortar Board member.

But being on Mortar Board is more than just an honor—it involves a prodigious amount of hard work: there was the clothing code drawn up and sent out to freshmen women to help them resolve the pre-college confusion of what to wear when, the song books compiled to help Midd students learn the traditional songs, the Dean’s List breakfast, the annual Christmas party for house directors, the student guide system for prospective Midd frosh, the senior outing for women—that revealing confessional when all comes to light, and the presentation of the Mortar Board Cup to an outstanding sophomore woman.

Every Middlebury co-ed is a constituent of the Women's Assembly through a representation system of one delegate to every ten girls.

Women's Assembly initiated the Community Chest plan, new this year, in which contributions to philanthropies were made all at once, replacing the previous system of four or five donations made throughout the school year.

The drive went well over its $2,000 goal, and exceeded the periodic drives of past years.

Other accomplishments of the group this year were the changes made in the signout system, Friday night late pers for Senior women, discussion of chapel and dormitory problems, and the radical achievement of obtaining half-hour later permissions for women during Thursday and Friday nights of Carnival.

To stress the responsibilities of student government, promote unity among the students, and encourage cooperation in self-government . . . the aims of the Women's Assembly come close to becoming a working reality.

Men's Assembly

The Men's assembly, presided over by Chester E. Nightingale, as one of the functions of the President of the Men's Undergraduate Association, is composed of representatives from dormitories, fraternities, and off-campus men. The ratio of representation is approximately one assemblyman to fifteen constituents.

The assembly conducts the elections of class officers of the four classes in the men's college and the election of the President of the Men's Undergraduate Association. The Secretary and Treasurer of the Association are chosen by the Assembly from within its ranks. Primary considerations of the men's assembly were the problems of the regulations on the use of automobiles, chapel, the community chest, collections for which were made by assembly members, and the problem of increased student government.
"The seasons come, the seasons go," and with them the typical campus scenes presented here. In the autumn, hikes (Moosalamoo for an easy introduction, Glen Ellen for the old-timers), apple picking (apple stealing), sailing at Dunmore, football crowd scenes, bonfires and rallies, and a three-month stretch of studying. Dormitory gab sessions covering anything from the freshman women to the categorical imperative. Winter—no studying until after Carnival. Skiing at Breadloaf. Carnival at last —snow sculptures, raccoon coats, amateur photography ("That blur of light there? That's Jacobs on the slalom."). Klondike and Ball mob scenes ("See those two ski sweaters up here in the top corner? That's me and Joe."). Spring—rain, swimming, rain, grassing, rain, tennis, yellow slickers, Junior Weekend, baseball, sunning—How much studying actually gets done at Dunmore, anyway?—Campus canines, Boswell, George, Henry, Diogenes. Graduation and the desperate feeling that you must take pictures of everything in sight to capture the essence of these days—to remember these places—and these people—always.
The thankless task of organizing the social and extra-curricular activities on campus goes to the Student Life Committee. Committee members, both faculty and student, work directly with the social director and the heads of the various campus organizations in preparing the year's social calendar. This involves numerous headaches and the use of considerable tact in avoiding repetitions and straightening out conflicts. The committee also has the responsibility of approving the constitutions of student organizations, and of acting as a sounding board for student suggestions and criticisms.

With cooperation and some compromise on the part of students and faculty alike, the Student Life Committee usually succeeds in arranging student activities to the satisfaction of both groups.

Student Life Committee

Educational Policy Committee

The two outstanding students of each academic division—humanities, science, languages, and social sciences, make up the Educational Policy Committee. Elected by the Men's and Women's Assemblies from a slate drawn up by the faculty heads of departments, the eight member student committee confers with faculty members and conveys student opinion and advice on curricular and extra-curricular matters.

This year the committee initiated a freshman adviser plan, with qualified seniors serving as advisers to four freshmen each.

The faculty evaluation sheets—a system in which each senior grades every professor he has had in his four years on a 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, scale, also are supervised by the committee.

The committee has been holding extensive discussions this year with faculty members on the subject of possible curriculum revisions.
Women's Forum

Women's Forum, composed of practically every member of the Women's College, does much to foster friendly town and college relations. Every Forum member can find a niche for her own particular talent—from washing clothes to leading a Scout troop.

Forum's activities mainly involve Middlebury's moppets, and give college women a foretaste of the type of community life in which they will someday participate as homemakers. Art and crafts classes, story hour, and Brownie and Girl Scout troops are part of the activities offered the younger set. Piano lessons are taught by a corps of fifty Midd student teachers, and Middlebury small fry are nudged gently into the social whirl by Forum sponsored dancing lessons—the young ladies eagerly learn the fundamental dance steps but the young men exhibit considerable disgust towards the whole idea, and, like small boys everywhere, want no truck with "gurls." The Ripton Christmas party is the event of the holiday season for youngsters in and around Middlebury, and is a very gala affair indeed, with presents for everyone distributed by a realistic Santa. This year the Forum has held lessons at the ice rink to help the younger children get their skating legs.

Forum also publishes the yearly calendars, complete with photographs of campus life. The proceeds from this and the sale of Thrift Shop clothing collected from dorms finance such projects as Thanksgiving and Easter baskets for needy families.

Middlebury Honors Founding Sesquicentennial Underway

Players Will Open Season With Great "Man"

The College Players opened their annual production of "The Great Man," by Jean Giraudoux, on October 13 for a series of tryouts leading to three one-act plays to be presented. The plays will be held tomorrow with days during the week, under the direction of Miss Geneva O'Neill, a professor of English. The three one-act plays will be held in the Playhouse, and members of all classes are urged to try out. The plays will be "The Boy Who Came Home" by A.A. Milne, "The Hoor" by Eugene O'Neill, to be presented. Casting for these players will be held tomorrow night from 9:00 to 12:00 p.m. at the Memorial Field House.

Music for the Ball will be supplied by the recently reorganized Black Panthers who will be making their first public appearance of the year. The house, unlike former years, will be optional and there will again be no curfews, it was announced by the sponsors. Tickets for the annual ball are being sold at $1.50.

U.S. Ambassador to Give Address

Highlighting the sesquicentennial celebration will be an address by Dr. Philip C. Jessup, ambassador-at-large, and diplomat in many crises, to be given on the topic, "Let Freedom Ring?" Jessup, a former football captain at Hamilton College, and still a six foot one expert with wordsmen as, will speak at the Memorial Field House at 10:00 a.m. on Saturday, following the academic procession. An expected to reaffirm United States democratic principles and to discuss current government attitudes toward the Soviet Union.

Mr. Jessup, who is listed in Who's Who as a professor of International law at Columbia University, has led a varied government career and was an assistant secretary general to the British Foreign Office when the first serious post-war relations date was discussed at Moscow. Shortly after the death of the late President in 1937 and the establishment of the Soviets, the two countries were in talks that resulted in the establishment of the United Nations. The American government has been a strong supporter of the United Nations, and Jessup is a strong supporter of the organization.

Jessup Cuts Russians "Down to Size"

In his speech to the American Academy of Political and Social Sciences, Jessup expressed his views on the Soviet Union. He said that the Soviet Union has sought to conquer the world, and that the United States must stand firm in the face of this threat. Jessup also discussed the importance of maintaining a strong military, and the need for a strong economy to support this military. He concluded his speech by stating that the United States must remain strong in order to protect its interests and values.

A small newspaper necessarily takes on distinct personality from its leaders. This year's Campus, under Leonard Inskip and Marcia McIntire, kept the best improvements of former editors and added others. The change from letterpress to photo-offset printing meant more pictures, better paper, and fewer words per inch. Innovation of the year in make-up was the printing of stories over the masthead. Tryouts for paying positions took charge of one whole issue in order to gain experience, and to be judged.

The sports page, under Ken Nourse, boosted hockey, carried on the feud with St. Michael's, placated the women by occasionally printing girls' sports news, and starred athletes of the week and Times-like overlines.

The harried business staff under Harry McGee and Shirley Herrman, coped with rising costs, readers who said there were too many ads, and irate alumni who complained they hadn't received a few copies. Somehow the paper always went out on time and the budget was balanced. Copies were sent to subscribers in England, Sweden and Germany, Chile, Hawaii and Mexico.

The Campus has ably fulfilled its functions of reporting all the College news that can be released, and of both summarizing and leading campus opinion through the Letters to the Editor column and the editorials. The Campus is fortunate in that it can express student opinion in opposition to the faculty and administration. Thought-provoking editorials were published on the problems of chapel, dismissals, car regulations, plagiarism, and what to do with the 2 million dollars.

Other departments were just as useful: Pins and Rings ("My last weekend's date has a girl at home!") , pledge lists ("Did we pledge him?"), News in Paragraphs and Midd Memo for items and sidelights too short to make a news story.

The Big Storm was covered in the best newspaper tradition. Pictures were taken the next day, stories were written in Mr. French's heatless and lightless office, and the issue came out as usual. Copies were sold downtown to scoop the Addison Independent.

The Campus—more than a weekly newspaper to those who work on it. It is a means of knowing all the scoops before they happen, an office where people are never too busy to have fun, and experience for a postgraduate job. Its motto might well be, "Never underestimate the power of a newspaper people are forced to buy.”
Giving budding authors a chance to break into print, Frontiers, the college literary magazine, represents the best in student prose and poetry.

Editors John Walsh and Arvin Trevvett and their staffs waded through two encouragingly large piles of manuscripts this year, making selections for the sixth and seventh issues of the magazine.

At one time Frontiers suffered under a barrage of criticism from befuddled students charging it with being, "too arty and ethereal," but now, though still retaining some high-brow aspects, the small, slick journal has compromised somewhat and caters to the Midd man-on-the-street as well as to the aesthete.

Art criticisms, humorous verse, serious poetry, essays, and short stories often showing considerable promise are chosen by discriminating staff members.

In the four years since its first appearance on the campus scene, Frontiers, with its thoughtful criticisms of the literary efforts of student writers and with the opportunity it gives writers to see their works actually published, has given many a young hopeful the necessary incentive to break into the world of letters.

Kaleidoscope

It must be noted that whatever the Kaleid staff might write about itself can be compared immediately with its product. Thus as one reads about the staff he is at the same time looking at the finished book of that organization so we won't make any rash claims to greatness.

Normally there is a lapse of one year between Kaleidoscopes but this year a standing joke has been which book would appear first, the Sesquicentennial edition or the 1951 edition. This book did go to press before its predecessor was issued but a sneak preview showed the latter was well worth waiting for.

In previous years the staff has been headed by a board of editors composed of six or seven juniors who were assisted by sophomore tryouts—no freshmen were employed. This staff for the first time used a system with four people on the editorial board who were assisted by ten sophomore assistant editors and a number of reporters—both freshmen and sophomores.

We are glad to be able to report that the system works very well—the book went to bed on time.

From its modest beginnings in a back yard chicken coop, Middlebury’s radio station grew into a flourishing campus activity with a wide following, and modern studios in the basement of the Student Union building. WMCRS reflected the campus taste in popular music, and the usually unruffled college disc jockeys recall with a shudder that memorable spring when the whole campus was “Rag Mop” happy. Classical music ran a close second in popularity to the modern platters, while news, student and faculty quizzes and interviews, and doings on campus made up the rest of the WMCRS programs. WMCRS business staffers gained the support of the town merchants whose commercials—relatively inoffensive, at that—helped make the radio a going concern.

But—we should have known it was too good to last. Reports began floating in that the station was being heard in town and as far away as Lake Dunmore. The Federal Communications Commission frowned upon this and sent up investigators who decided that the station was overreaching its prescribed radius. The station was suspended.

Now the only hope for WMCRS is a system of radiation within each dorm, with telephone lines connected to the main transmitter. This will run into money, however.

At the time this book went to press WMCRS had made a successful test broadcast and hoped to resume operations soon.
I. R. C.

The IRC is a group of thirty men and women who devote themselves to the study and discussion of world affairs. With the help of Mr. Cline, Mr. Illick, Mr. Bogart, Mr. Valentine, and Mr. Heinrichs, the eight-man executive council organizes on the average of one program every three weeks.

The club’s initial program this year was an informal reception in Pearson’s living room for the Korean guest speaker, Mrs. Induk Pahk, who answered questions, sang Korean folk songs, and graphically described her country’s people and customs.

The members participate in sometimes vehement, sometimes thoughtful discussion among themselves on such topics as Yugoslavia, Red China, Pakistan, and Russia.

In February, four IRC members journeyed to St. Lawrence University in Canton, New York, to participate in a mock meeting of the U. N. Security Council. The Middelgation represented France on the panel and discussed such pertinent subjects as German re-armament, and the Kashmir debates.

The Middlebury IRC is a branch of the national IRC and has attended several meetings of the local Vermont chapter.
"There's no business like show business," as any member of Middlebury's Players will enthusiastically agree. The appeal of the limelight, a love of grease paint, the opportunity for group participation and congeniality—any and all of these factors help to account for the dedicated workers found in the organization.

While Midd audiences see the polished productions, complete with detailed scenery, costumes, and a talented cast, they know that all this is possible only through long, tedious hours of rehearsals and the untiring efforts of the unsung heroes behind the scenes. To those who are never seen on stage—the make-up crew, scenery construction gang, prompters, and ticket sellers go much of the credit, for without their teamwork, little could be accomplished.

This year's two major productions, "The Madwoman of Chaillot," as the fall production, and "See How They Run," Winter Carnival comedy, were both highly praised as unusually entertaining interpretations, and particularly outstanding as amateur productions.

To correlate with its major productions, the Players have instituted a series of one act plays, directed by the students themselves, either as a class requirement or simply for the fun and experience involved. These give the less experienced a chance to display their talents and introduce new directors.

The Players are justly proud of their director, Erie Volkert, who as head of the Players, is the big gun behind all presentations. His vivacity and charm, plus his own...

Mr. Volkert directs ability of portrayal make him an inspiring director. Talented Jim Van Wart, as Mr. Volkert's right-hand man, excels as an actor as well as a director.

Besides audience approval there is a greater reward for hard working Players—membership in Wig and Pen, the governing board of the larger organization.

Even if Midd Players may never achieve fame as Thespians in later life, the teamwork and fair play they have learned, the companionship and good times they have enjoyed, and the hard work, enthusiasm and ambition they have maintained will stand them in good stead throughout their lives.

A scene from "Madwoman of Chaillot"
Debating Club

The debating team abounded this year in eloquent orators. The team, coached by Mr. Perley Perkins, participated in debates with Champlain, MIT, Boston University, Harvard, St. Michaels, and University of Vermont. The women held their own against Bates, New York University, McGill, Columbia, and Cooper Union.

The team is spurred on to greater flights of oratory by the generous prizes available to the members. The top three debaters of the men’s team and of the women’s team are awarded prizes of $250, $150, and $100.

Two of the debaters, Shoana Edgar and Haydon Mason, a graduate student, engaged in a battle of wits with two British debaters from the University of Birmingham and the College of North-Wales on the proposition "Resolved that both of us would gain were Britain and America to trade their broadcasting systems."

Alchemist Club

An outgrowth of one of Midd’s outstanding departments, and an affiliate of the American Chemical Society, the Alchemists’ aim is to broaden the scientific scope of the members into subjects outside of their own immediate fields.

Once a year the unsuspecting public is given a peep into the mysteries of the chemical world by the Chem show, traditionally started off with a bang by the explosion of a hydrogen balloon. Experiments involving the freezing of hapless goldfish, liquid mixtures bubbling through a maze of glass tubing, beakers and funnels are part of the entertainment offered the awed layman audience.

This year a permanent award in the memory of Professor Robert Harris of the Chemistry department was established by the club, and is to be given annually to the outstanding chemistry major of the senior class.
Newman Club

President Ray Ablondi led the Newman Club through a very productive year.

The meetings held every other week in the Student Union Building are open to anyone interested . . . membership is not restricted to Catholics.

Guest speakers cover subjects of vital interest to the members . . . evolution, marriage, the church and the state, the church and science, contemporary problems. Discussions bring out ideas and opinions bearing on religion, and other fields.

The group is also a social club . . . an opportunity to meet in a congenial setting . . . and a dance is usually held in the spring.

The Newman Club is an attempt to bring their religion more fully into the everyday lives of its members, and to carry religious training over into campus life.

Christian Association

A great range of opinion on matters religious is found among the members of the Christian Association—a fact which makes for lively discussions and meetings.

The purpose of the group is three-fold—devotional, educational, and philanthropic.

The devotional aspect is of a personal nature and takes the form of informal Sunday afternoon discussions, led by Dr. Bedford, in which the fundamental concepts of Christianity are explored.

The intellectual approach to religion is stressed in the series of lectures given by faculty members.

The philanthropic angle comes out in the club’s local projects for the relief of needy families in the area.

Several square dances were sponsored throughout the year, with the proceeds going towards sending club members to conferences on religious subjects at New England colleges.

The Middlebury Christian Association is an affiliate of the Student Christian Movement of New England.
Band

"Victory, Oh Victory", dapper blue uniforms, "Double" Whitmore and her spectacular baton wielding, clever half-time stunts—some of the elements that make up the college band.

An indispensable part of football games and pep rallies, the band is associated not only with crisp autumn weather and cheering crowds, for it executes a neat about face in the spring when it performs symphonic works as a concert group.

Al Burbank, known for his talented trumpet, is the director of the forty-student band; while Roly Coates and Reka Kearney serve as student director and secretary.

Chamber Music Groups

The finest compositions in the musical realm from Bach to Kern may be found in the repertoire of the Chamber Music Groups.

The senior group consists of the more advanced performers, many of whom play with the Vermont State Symphony Orchestra; while the junior group is composed of student musicians who are striving for the coveted membership in the senior group. The senior group gives five concerts at towns and schools in the area as well as three or four performances before the college student body.
The fifty members of Middlebury's Senior Choir, sedately gowned and capped in black, were directed this year by Mr. Ward Bedford.

The choir represents the student body in the college’s devotional and musical life, demonstrating versatility in its rendition of the Sunday chapel anthems, its familiar greeting of the alumni with the strains of “College on the Hill” during Homecoming Weekend, and its numerous trips off campus for concert appearances.

Long hours of painstaking practice produce the two traditional concerts given by the choir in cooperation with the Freshman Chorus. This year the Christmas program was bypassed because of the storm-damaged chapel, but the Easter production rated with the best of the choir’s efforts. Another big event of 1950 was the spring trip to Boston to appear with the Boston Pops Orchestra on a national radio hook-up.

By learning and polishing musical works, the Choir is becoming warmly accepted throughout the East. They accepted an invitation to sing at the Town Hall, N.Y.C., thereby increasing their already good singing reputation.
Modern Dance

Finding a creative outlet in the medium of the dance are the twenty Middlebury girls of the Modern Dance group.

Aiming at self expression the group makes up its own choreography and interpretations in both group and solo performances.

The impressive results of the twice-weekly rehearsals under the supervision of Mrs. Lee were shown in last spring’s production which was highlighted by the story in dance of dance throughout the ages. In the March presentation of Gordon Jenkin’s “Manhattan Tower”, the group exhibited imaginative interpretation and flawless technique.

Men’s Glee Club

The 45 gentlemen songsters of the Glee Club have been off on sprees ever since its beginning a little over two years ago. These sprees have taken the form of frequent trips to girls’ colleges in the vicinity—where the most appreciative audiences can be found.

Last fall, the Glee Club did a radio program for the Monsanto Chemical Company over Station WTIC, in a broadcast which was heard all over New England. A near mishap, when a tree fell on the wires, was avoided just in time, and the broadcast went off without a hitch.

This spring the group appeared at Symphony Hall in Boston to sing on “Midnight at the Pops”. This marked the first public performance of Instructor Jean Berger’s “Recruit,” composed for the Glee Club.

The Glee Club also put on a spring appearance at the Weeks School for underprivileged children.

With Baird Whitlock as Director, Bob Martin as President, Jack Sacher as manager and Dan Nyman and Bob Arel as accompanists, the Middlebury Glee Club is definitely a going concern.
For a long time to come, whenever we hear the strains of "Moonlight in Vermont," we’ll think of the Black Panthers of Middlebury College. For everything from football victory stomps to decorous formal balls, the Panthers give out with their own inimitable brand of Midd music.

The Panthers are a highly select aggregation—aspiring musicians must go through a trial period before they become full-fledged Panthers.

The Panthers played their excellent dance music at two of our formals this year—the Commodore’s Ball sponsored by the Sailing Club and the Sophomore Formal sponsored by the Sophomore class. In addition the Panthers have played at a number of not so formal Saturday night dances.

The Panther’s pear-shaped tones are not strictly confined to the Middlebury campus—recently they were invited to play at the Governor’s Ball in Montpelier, and they make frequent trips to colleges in the New England area to perform before appreciative audiences.
French Club

Roy, sec.; Pierce, social chairman; Parker, treas.; Gilligan, pres.; Reger, vice-pres.

Classroom French at Middlebury paves the way for membership in the Cercle Français, one of the largest student organizations on campus. Welcoming a change from formal classroom usage, over eighty French students gather once a month. The atmosphere is one of active interest, as first year students, who are falteringly conscious of newly learned idioms, meet and discover foreign customs with French majors, faculty and grad students. The function of the club is primarily social, and the officers and members plan an extensive calendar of events each year.

This year's activities started one memorable fall afternoon on Chipman Hill at a gay "Bacon Bat" with the Spanish Club. The next month found the group indoors for French games and an organization meeting. Movies of a French tour were shown at a later meeting, bringing authentic French atmosphere to the enthusiastic group in the Grand Salon at the Chat.

The Christmas pageant, enhanced by the singing of familiar French carols, was presented the week before vacation.

Other major events of the year were the Variety Show, giving vent to the talents of the members, and the French Club Formal, a unique and gala affair attended by a goodly percentage of the student body.

An offshoot of the parent French Club is the annual "Mi-careme," a traditional French celebration for the inmates of the Chat. All go in costume—each class gives a skit, and Dr. Freeman bakes his incomparable crepes for the entire company. Gaiety lasts far into the night amid a shower of confetti and song.

Mr. Marty’s puns, Mr. Boucier’s songs, Dr. Freeman’s friendliness, Mme. Binand’s enthusiasm, and Mlle. Huchon’s vitality all contribute to making the French Club one of the most popular clubs in Middlebury.

Ici se trouve le Cercle Français
Russian Club

Guided by the enthusiastic Payer, the Middlebury Russian Club is a congenial group of twenty students who meet to make practical use of their knowledge of the Russian language and to delve into Russian culture, art, and food. Talks by authorities, folk dancing, blinchike (pancakes and cheese) served with an exotic beverage consisting of tea with jam served in glasses and the tea brewed in the club's very own Russian samovar, are just a few of the activities of the group.

Spring plans included a motion picture sponsored jointly with the French Club based on a Russian story with French dialogue, a picnic at Dunmore in the spring, and a weekend in New York to visit Russian restaurants, bookstores and movies.

Chase, vice-pres.; Vogel, pres.; Almquist, sec.

Spanish Club

"El Circulo Espanol" is Middlebury's solution for those who enjoy getting together for enchiladas and conversations in rapid-fire Spanish.

Most members of the Spanish club have had at least two years of the language, and gain invaluable practice by trying out their idioms on each other. New insight into Spanish customs, life, and art is gained from slides and talks by different members of the department.

Informal contacts with the faculty bring out aspects of their personalities perhaps unsuspected in the classroom: Mr. Morales' penchant for subtle jokes, Miss Mata's love of singing—she gives lessons in Spanish songs twice a week, Mr. Guarnaccia's and Miss Martin's culinary ability—evidenced by Spanish suppers at their homes.

One-act plays, a Dog Team banquet, movies, a Christmas party—some of the activities of the Spanish club, a truly "simpatico" group.

Unlike large universities, undue emphasis is not placed upon sororities and fraternities at Midd but the bonds of fraternity life often make for lasting friendship; and the fraternity houses serve as the hub of campus social affairs. The sororities devote much of their time to philanthropic projects and the educational and social development of their members.
Panhellenic, the governing board of Middlebury's sororities, was headed this year by Jean Flauss. Each sorority is represented on Pan-Hell by two elected members, a sophomore and a junior.

One of the council's most worthwhile activities is the awarding in the spring of a $100 scholarship to an outstanding sophomore girl, either neutral or affiliated. A scholarship cup is presented to the sorority with the highest average for the term—won for the fourth consecutive semester by Tri-Delt last spring.

Athletically inclined sorority girls can take advantage of Pan-Hell sponsored basketball games.

With the rushing season comes the Council's busiest six weeks. Each fall the freshman women are invited to a Panhellenic-sponsored tea where the prospective sorority members are given a chance to ask questions about the sorority system at Middlebury. All of the rushing rules and regulations are under the eyes of the Council.

Under national supervision, the Council regulates sororities, helps the Middlebury system as a whole to operate smoothly, and preserves that sisterly feeling in Middlebury sorority women.

The Interfraternity Council is the governing body of all fraternity activities on campus. The IFC consists of two representatives from each fraternity on campus, with Bill Huey as gavel wielder. It concerns itself primarily with the rushing program—sets the quotas, determines the calendar, makes rules covering the conduct of rushing, and provides each freshman with full particulars on fraternity life.

IFC is the representative of the fraternities and serves as a clearing house for members' gripes and suggestions.

The Bowdoin Plan, under which each member fraternity provides room and board for a semester to a foreign student, is one of the most constructive IFC-sponsored projects. This year Guenter Weber of Germany, Henrik Thommessen of Norway, Jan Luytjes of the Netherlands, and Bjorn Stokke of Norway, were the four Bowdoin Plan students to whom the college granted full tuition and the IFC provided room and board, giving them a chance to get the inside story on American college life.

The IFC also takes charge of all cups awarded to the fraternities—the Trophy of Trophies, the Interfraternity Cup, and the awards for snow sculpture and homecoming decorations.

The Middlebury IFC is a member of the National Interfraternity Council and sends representatives to its meetings.

Alpha Sigma Psi

Alpha Sigma Psi, located at 1 College Street, is Middlebury's only independent fraternity.

The Alpha Slugs are renowned for their octet, a singing group specializing in barbershop harmony, this year under the leadership of Bob Ross.

The monotet, newly formed this year, is a novel singing group which has done away with the old-hat method of singing up and down—each member stays on his note.

The Slugs literally take the shirts off their backs to present the annual poverty party, which last year featured Don Lelong modeling a barrel.

As if this in itself were not enough, the Slugs' roof was raised again in the fall—however not by the traditional whooping it up but by the forces of nature during the November storm while all the members were on an overnight hike at the snow-bowl. This permitted a great deal of water to enter, although the level of water on the second floor was kept down by the drainage to lower levels.

The Slugs, presided over this year by Don Lelong and John Taylor, are crowing over the fact that they were the only fraternity on campus which had no pledges ineligible for initiation because of academic reasons this year. The initiation banquet at the Bristol Inn featured speakers Arthur K. D. Healy and Philip C. Hoffmire.
Alpha Xi Delta has the jump on the other campus sororities in that it is the only one to claim both a married president, Barbara Rannenberg, and a married vice-president, Barbara Prinn.

The women of Alpha Xi have taken upon themselves the task of supporting a ten year old Greek girl, to whom they send hand-knit sweaters, food, and letters.

In the springtime, wives of the Middlebury faculty and officers are honored at an annual tea given by the Alpha Xi’s.

The sorority is blessed with an unusually enterprising pledge class. The freshmen sold cookies in the dorms to help pay for the redecorating of the powder room, and bought a $2.00 cake, of which they ate half, cut the rest into miniscule pieces, and sold them for a total of $2.50.

Mr. Lane of the physiology course, and Mr. Whitlock, English instructor, spoke at educational meetings of Alpha Xi this year.
The rest of the campus was slightly green eyed the day after the November storm whenever mention was made of the ATO's, for not only had the brothers had dates until 3 a.m. Sunday morning, but the house was warm and brightly lighted while the majority of the students huddled shivering in their cold, gloomy rooms.

This circumstance was due to the fact that because of the ham radio set belonging to brother Roger Freeman the fire department saw the ATO house as the ideal spot in which to install a generator.

Presided over by Tom Leavitt, the ATO's are a versatile crew, but seem to have a monopoly on the college radio station. John Bowker and Larry Draper were the original founders of WMCRS and their fraternity brothers serve as announcers, technicians, and disc jockeys.

Hundreds of students flocked to this year's fourth annual ATO dance in the Breadloaf barn which featured the rhythms of Burn Martin's five-piece band.
It was a longer walk to the Tri-Delt rooms this year, but well worth it. The impressive handiwork of Tri-Delt decorators, paper-hangers, electricians, and economists, supervised by President Mary Hench, are very much in evidence in the little cottage in the rear of the Charter House. The new kitchen was immediately put to use at an open supper, the profits of which were added to the scholarship fund.

Among the faculty guests who spoke at meeting this year was Mr. Clark, whose talk included a convincing demonstration of hypnosis.

The Tri-Delts have adopted a needy family in town, and conscientiously remember each of the five children’s birthdays with cakes and presents.

Spring to the Tri-Delts means the traditional Theta Chi-Tri-Delt basketball game. The chivalrous brothers handicap themselves by wearing mittens, removing their shoes, and tying their hands behind them, but usually win anyway and are paid off with a picnic at Chipman Hill.
DKE is marching onward this year as usual and is creeping up the scholastic scale, having raised itself this year from the bottom of the list to third from the bottom.

Undaunted, however, the DKE's won the intramural football trophy. Ten of the brothers are on the varsity football squad, and the house is well represented in other major sports with an unusual number of avid skiers.

Rollie Schopp and Dick Troy did most of the renovating of the game room which is now a sophisticated lounge with knotty pine walls and a glass brick milk bar.

Four of Middlebury's trustees and six administration members are DKE's.

Bill Tracy is the president of the jolly old DKE's.

Delta Upsilon

"Adam was the first man to ever wear the pin" and Middlebury's DU's, over seventy of them, seem to think he had the right idea.

The DU's, presided over this year by Mal MacGregor and John Walsh, made a good showing in intramural sports and were top contenders for the trophy of trophies.

The DU's are known as the "well bred" element on campus. Decorous Saturday night parties—until 12:30, that is, are their forte except for a certain night in April when propriety is neatly dispensed with and anything goes—well almost. The house is transformed into an authentic saloon and the brothers and their dates in the guise of disreputable characters gambol through a night of earthy revelry, otherwise known as the Bar-room Brawl.

Middlebury's DU's are justly proud of brother John Walsh, '51, who this year was awarded a Rhodes scholarship—the first from Middlebury in twelve years—as well as a Phi Beta Kappa key.
Talent abounds at the Theta Chi house. There is the artistic element, which has rendered the basement walls more appealing than the latest issue of “Flaming Passion”; the musical element, which has formed a quartet—sometimes off-key, more often off-color, composed of Charlie Castle, Reggie Oates, Tom Boss, and Bob Ringer, and also boasts of enough talent to outfit a complete band; the shrewd element, which tries to out-finesse itself at the bridge table; and the unique element, which is responsible for the trim, good looking cellar game room complete with red leather seats and swinging door, and some of the liveliest parties on campus—notable this year was the Shipwreck dance at which everyone appeared looking like so many pieces of flotsam and jetsam.

The male directors of the Variety Show this year were all Theta Chi as were the cheerleaders.

But the brothers are not perennial party boys—they sponsored a lecturer, Rev. Danielson from Skidmore, who spoke on the subject of Israel.

Scat Hagan was the T.C. president this year.
One of the few sororities on campus to have their own house—well, part of a house, at least, the KD's were headed this year by Panhellenic council president Jean Flauss.

The girls devote much of their spare time to philanthropy and pack baskets of food as well as lend financial aid to a local family in need of help.

Well known for their parties and Friday night suppers, KD sponsors a Cafe, held annually for the pledges, a costume affair that rivals the more notorious DU Bar-room Brawl. The Halloween party is a gay celebration at which, thanks to the KD's, all Middlebury sorority girls revert happily to their childhood for a night of juvenile games and pranks.

The KD characters threw two showers this year—one for Professor Hitchcock's wife who was expecting a baby, and one for sister Barbara Whitney who was expecting a husband.
Far from the moil and toil of life on the hill, the KDR rancho is strategically located near the entrance to Porter Field.

With President Jack Cran as head ranchero, the KDR's are noted for their ingenious parties—especially the Rodeo, which is held, and we quote, "the first good grassing weekend in April." This rural festival gets underway with a hayride and winds up at the ranch house.

Dancing at this yearly affair is hampered by the fact that the flaming red floor is completely covered with hay, but the brothers make a valiant attempt anyway.

Mrs. Tosher, the cook and gracious housemother, Bill "Mandrake" Platka's sleights of hand, and Nigger the cat are numbered among KDR assets.

The fifty brothers are patting each other and especially George Rapp on the back over the completion of the rustic cellar bar.
The Kappas' main claim to fame is their legendary beauty—last year's Junior Weekend queen and this year's Carnival queen were KKG's.

This year the Kappas redid their rooms which are picturesquely perched over the Otter. They painted the walls a lady-like shade of blue, hung white curtains at the windows, then threw open their doors for a spirited room-warming.

The Kappas' philanthropic project consists of sending food, clothing, and letters to a small Chinese boy.

The tea for faculty wives and the Easter party for faculty offspring are the KKG's contribution to friendly faculty-student relationships.

The Pi Phi-Kappa debate of this past winter saw Nancy Berquist and Barbara Butler taking the affirmative side of the question, "Should women between the ages of twenty-two and twenty-six be drafted?" This debate showed sober consideration of a contemporary problem, and ended in a draw.

A Kappa maxim, rigidly adhered to, is, "It takes a prim, a pure, and an old fashioned girl to be a KKG."
The Pi Phi clan, with Carol Osborne as president, convenes weekly in rooms above the First National.

Famous for their spaghetti suppers and Pi Phi salad, the "Ring-ting-ting" girls chalked up 1950-1951 as one of their busiest years.

In the philanthropic line, the Pi Phi's contribute money for arts and crafts to a settlement school in Tennessee as their part in the national project. As a local chapter, they send clothes and food to a young Greek girl.

A slightly incoherent story is told of the fall weekend at the WAA cabin. It involves a human chain which rescued the bucket from the well, an unfathomable plumbing system, and a bit of fishing for tin cans—all performed to the tune of "Swinging Along."

A farcical ice hockey game with the KKG's, an ill disguised free-for-all with players clad in long underwear and all manner of peculiar garb, was played in March.
Science and French majors predominate in Sigma Kappa, according to President Chips Stutz.

In cooperation with the national fraternity, Sigma Kappa has undertaken an ambitious philanthropic project—giving financial aid to furnish a medical ship of the Maine Seacoast Mission—a vessel that plies between the remote villages of Maine, bringing medical supplies to the inhabitants.

On its own, Sigma Kappa makes toys and scrapbooks for the amusement of children in the Vermont Preventorium.

The tea for faculty wives, the autumn dance at the Waybury Inn honoring Sigma Kappa’s fourteen pledges, and the frequent weekend jaunts to Bunny Scott’s apple farm in nearby Vergennes all contributed to Sigma’s busy social season.

The Sigma Kappa walls are sporting a new coat of green paint, applied by the more artistic members last spring.
The Sig Ep men, boasting the only TV set on campus, are dominated by a passion for poker and, with the exception of four maverick bridge players, the entire group has been converted to the game.

The brothers' unerring eye for feminine beauty is shown by the fact that for the past two years the queen of Junior Weekend has been their candidate.

The Sig Ep's major public social functions are the Hayseed Soiree, a bucolic shindig where everyone and his date appear decked out in the latest hick styles and imbibe a modified version of Kickapoo Joy Juice, and the Circus, a free for all—Middlebury style.

A high percentage of Sig Eps are on varsity teams, and the brothers consistently come out on top in intramural hockey competition.

The services beckoned to eight of the brothers this year. Four Sig Eps, among them President Chuck Ratte, are in the Marines, two are in the Navy, and two in the Army.
The newest fraternity on campus, Phi Kappa Tau, is rapidly establishing itself as one of the Big Nine. The PKT’s were recognized by the national fraternity since last spring, and this fall added eighteen new pledges to their roster of seventeen members.

Not quite all of the PKT’s are phys. ed. majors, but adroitly wielded hockey sticks and strong pitching arms seem to be characteristic possessions of the brothers who are well represented on varsity teams.

Holding their own on the social world as well, the PKT’s put on a Mardi-Gras in the spring, which had the big white house on Storrs Avenue rocking on its foundations.

President Fluff Grocott and his boys have been hard at work on their basement game room for which they are planning a knotty pine decor.
In the rooms above Lazarus', President Ruth Eldridge wields the gavel as head of the energetic Phi Mu's.

The PM's work with Sigma Kappa on the project of the Vermont Preventorium—a home for the children of tubercular parents—sending them toys, and knitting for them in their spare time.

The Phi Mu's have completely redecorated their rooms from top to bottom—they even have a new piano.

"Showboat," the annual black-face minstrel show, has become a Phi Mu classic. Sorority girls and their guests are invited free to view the display of talent. And the Phi Mu's enjoy it as much as the audience does—especially the rehearsal weekend spent at the WAA cabin.

This year the girls treated themselves to a Halloween party and strung the room with realistic cobwebs.

Mr. Whitlock, who seems to be the fair haired boy of the sororities, spoke at a Phi Mu meeting too.
The Chi Psi Lodge, under its president, Chuck Rielle, was overflowing with cups this year, for not only did the brothers win the scholarship cup for the highest academic standing among the fraternities for the fourth consecutive semester, but they were presented last Spring with the Trophy of Trophies for excellence along athletic lines, both intramurally and in varsity competition.

In addition the Chipsis were awarded the Winter Carnival Snow Sculpture prize for their depiction of a genii blowing a skier out of a ski cup.

The annual Apache dance is one of the more notable fraternity parties. Everyone comes to this affair dressed in every conceivable manner of Left-Bank attire, and a decidedly Bohemian atmosphere displaces the usual genteel air of the lodge.

The big stone house of fraternity row boasts a new parking lot this year which is unused in Winter however due to its difficulty of access during ice and snow conditions.

Chipsi the dog, the lodge's luxurious interior and a confident spirit combine to keep the brothers of Chi Psi happy.
From the first tangy autumn days at Porter Field with the crowd spurring on the blue-togged team, to the last lazy May afternoons with the sharp smack of tennis balls against rackets filling the spring air, sports are very much a part of our college days . . . providing thrills for the spectators, sometimes gruelling hours for the players, but instilling a sense of fair play and comradeship in us all.
Football

Middlebury's football team, under Coach Walter Duke Nelson and Captain Ralph Loveys, recorded three wins, four losses and one tie for the season of 1950. Wins were chalked up against Hamilton, Norwich, and Union, and a tie recorded against Wesleyan, while the Panthers lost to St. Lawrence, Tufts, Trinity and Vermont.

Middlebury's football team, under Coach Walter Duke Nelson and Captain Ralph Loveys, recorded three wins, four losses and one tie for the season of 1950. Wins were chalked up against Hamilton, Norwich, and Union, and a tie recorded against Wesleyan, while the Panthers lost to St. Lawrence, Tufts, Trinity and Vermont.

After practice scirmages against RPI in Troy and against Williams in Middlebury, the opening game of the season was played against highly powered Wesleyan on Porter Field. The game was one of the features of the Sesquicentennial Weekend being celebrated by Middlebury College.

The visitors, from Middletown, Conn., opened the scoring in the second quarter with a touchdown by Halfback Bill Hicks. Middlebury came back to tie up the ball game in the second quarter, 6-6, when Dick Worthington took off on a long run after cutting through right guard.

In the third quarter a 29-yard pass and a successful conversion by the visitors put Wesleyan in front 13-6. However, in the fourth quarter, fullback Wendy Forbes, wearing number 40, smashed over the goal line to bring the Panthers within one point of the charges of Wesleyan coach Norm Daniels. A silence came over the crowd as Bab Stalker prepared to attempt the conversion—a silence which broke into a roar as the ball sailed between the uprights. Final score Middlebury 13, Wesleyan 13.

The Panthers next journeyed to Clinton, New York, where they scored a 21-6 win over Hamilton College as Walt Hollister scored twice and Ralph Loveys scored once.

The game's first score came in the second period when Hollister swept his own left end from the three yard line and Don MacLean converted giving Midd a 7-0 lead. In the same period Hollister, taking off from the left side of the line and cutting back to his right, sprinted 75 yards for the second score, MacLean again adding the extra point.
The third Panther touchdown came in the third period on an Allen to Loveys pass play which netted 25 yards.

Following this win Middlebury suffered a 39-0 loss at the hands of St. Lawrence in Canton, New York. The home team was held to a 6-0 lead during the first half but the second half saw five touchdowns scored against Midd. Loveys, Stalker, and Cahill were side-lined with injuries.

Middlebury's first defeat on Porter Field since the Wesleyan game in 1946 was recorded when a Tufts visiting eleven out-scored the Panthers, 19-0, the same score by which they beat the Panthers in 1949. Sparking the game for Middlebury was the pass catching of Jim MacTiernan, the defensive play of Yiyo Sierra and the punting of Wendy Forbes.

Middlebury played its best game of the year when a highly favored Trinity College eleven journeyed to Porter Field from Hartford, Conn. The Panthers lost this one 35-19 but put on an excellent performance. Middlebury jumped to 13-0 lead in the first five minutes of the game, the first score coming on a kick blocked by Hank Draghi and scooped up by Ralph Loveys, and a Forbes to Stalker pass play.

Middlebury's second touchdown came very shortly after on a punt runback by Sierra, line plunges by Forbes and Stalker, and a right end run of 16 yards by Dick Allen. MacLean made the conversion and Middlebury led 13-0. Trinity started rolling however, scoring three touchdowns before the half ended and two more in the second half while Middlebury scored but once on a line plunge by Forbes. Final score, Trinity 35, Middlebury 19.

Middlebury's first game in the Vermont State Conference was played at Porter Field against Norwich. Middlebury was able to score freely and to hold their opponents scoreless. With two touchdowns in the second period and three in the third period the Panthers romped to a 32-0 victory.
Scoring touchdowns were Forbes on a line buck from the 1 yard line, Rathburn off right guard from the 18, and Worthington on dashes from the 12 and later from the 35.

From the tailback spot Dick Allen, wearing number 20, gained more than 150 yards, or over half of the team's yardage gained on the ground.

Middlebury's seventh game of the season was played in Schenectady where Middlebury upset Union for the second straight year. The score, Middlebury 20, Union 6.

The first score stemmed from an intercepted pass by Bob Dibble followed by an 82-yard march led by Dick Worthington to the Union 1-yard line. From the 1 Wendy Forbes bucked over for the score and Don MacLean converted.

The season: 3 wins, 4 losses, 1 tie.

Great credit went to the defensive platoon for the afternoon's work. Aggressive charging forced Union to fumble nine times during the game.

The final game of the season was played at Centennial Field in Burlington against the University of Vermont, who had not beaten Middlebury since 1942. The Catamounts, decided underdogs, upset Middlebury and came out on the long end of a 24-7 score. Vermont, led by quarterback Ralph Kehoe, used the Wing T, the Straight T and spread formations, making full use of speedsters Billy Howard and Bobby Brown.

The season: 3 wins, 4 losses, 1 tie.
Because of their athletic antics, this year's cheerleading squad proved almost as interesting as the fracases on the field. There was a cheer from the crowd and a sigh of relief from Jeff Francisco each time that George Tasse somersaulted him to the ground intact in the skyrocket cheer. Besides Barbie Butler there was still another addition to the squad this year—the little black "panther" that made its debut at the Trinity game—that was the never-to-be-forgotten day of the mock football game between the Trinity males and the Midd femmes of the two pep squads—cheers rocked the stadium when Robbie Rey ran for the first female touch-down in Midd history.

Credit is due the 1950 squad who, in spite of "stiff" competition from Giff Eager's bugle, managed to keep the cheers organized and the team staunchly supported.
Ski Patrol

With ski fever as prevalent as it is at Middlebury, a capable, well-trained ski patrol is a must. Led by Bob Bishop, the Middlebury contingent carefully patrol the Breadloaf slopes every day during the winter months, in an attempt to keep the novice snow-bunnies from fracturing anything vital. In case of accidents, the patrol administers first aid and rushes the victim to the hospital.

To a stricken skier, a capable member of the ski patrol bearing down upon him looks even better than a Saint Bernard with a cask around his neck.

Ski Club

Every grade of skier, from the novice to the advanced, can find a niche in the Ski Club. Newly formed this year, the club helped immeasurably to "put Midd on skis" with frequent lessons given by club members on Chapel Hill and at Breadloaf.

Snow shoe treks through the Vermont woods, and weekend ski hikes to areas such as famed Mad River Glen were but a few of the attractions that lured over fifty members into the Ski Club.

The club was formed because so many students in this supposedly ski-minded college were bewailing the fact that they wanted to master the hickories, but "never got around to it."
Skiing

At other colleges snow-time is just another season of the year but at Middlebury winter means skiing and, since 1946, it has meant a nationally known ski team which competes for top honors in collegiate circles.

The 1951 season was no exception to the previous ones as the Panthers once again took the field against top teams such as Dartmouth, New Hampshire, McGill, and St. Lawrence.

As usual the first two meets were canceled because of an abundance of grass, but on Feb. 9-10 Midd journeyed to the renowned Dartmouth Winter Carnival. The University of Denver took first by a large margin but, as Midd cleaned up in downhill with Jacobs, Ireland and Goodwin scoring 2nd, 3rd and 4th, the Panthers beat out the Big Green of Dartmouth by two points. Captain Jacobs, the smallest big man on the team, just missed being Dartmouth skimeister for the second year in a row.

The following weekend Middlebury competed in the McGill Winter Carnival which also involved the EISA (Eastern Intercol-Legiate Ski Association) championships which Midd has won for four years running. The EISA was formerly the Intercollegiate Ski Union. However, in the cold heart of flu ridden Quebec something happened (it must have been the wax) and Dartmouth forged ahead in downhill-slalom events to offset Midd's early advantage in cross-country. Jacobs won the cross-country, Shaw got a third in downhill and Fuzz Goodwin captured the coveted skimeister trophy.

On February 22, 23, 24 Middlebury entertained the top collegiate teams at its annual Winter Carnival. Hard luck really hit the Panthers this time as Captain Jacobs, bedridden for the first part of the week, was unable to run cross-country, Dick Smith was out with a sprained ankle, and Ceddie Sherrar was feeling the effects of the flu. In addition Dick Ireland, with a bad fall, was unable to complete his downhill run, and was taken sick before the slalom race.

As a result Midd ran behind for the whole meet and ended up in second place 19.4 points behind the winner, Dartmouth.

These three meets, however, do not tell the whole story of the 1951 ski season. Open meets such as the Gibson Trophy race and the Hochgebirge race provided competition... on off weeks. One of the more noteworthy events from the Middlebury point of view was the Vic Constant race at Stowe’s Mt. Mansfield where Verne Goodwin walked off, or skied off, with the first place cup by a wide margin. Dick Ireland was second, Shaw, Joe Jones and even “Ole” Bobo were in the first ten.

Except for Tommy Jacobs all of the big names are slated to return next year, barring the draft. They include Ireland, Shaw, Goodwin, Sherrer, Smith, and Whiteside.
Mountain Club

The Mountain Club greets the freshman with the gala freshman outing. Sack races, songs, scavenger hunts, and an outdoor supper are overwhelmingly successful in breaking down the barriers of shyness—a common malady during the neophyte's first few days at Midd. From this day on, Mountain Club activities become an integral part of college life.

The Club's most ambitious project this year was the building of the Mountain Club cabin at the top of the downhill trail overlooking Lake Pleiad. Constructed solely by Skyline tryouts and members under the direction of Joe Jones and Mr. H. P. Bicknell, the cabin was completed in the late fall. Energetic students cut the spruce trees, and skinned the bark, to erect the thirteen by eighteen foot cabin. Floor planking and the sheet metal roof were hauled up the mountain from the ski center, a hike in itself. The cabin is being used by the organization for overnight hikes, as well as for a warming cabin for competitors and officials during ski events.

Throughout the fall, the club went on its traditional hikes. Probably the most popular and well-attended was the Mt. Moosalamoo expedition. The long climb was topped off by a swim at the Cascades. Everyone, dungarees and all, piled into the icy water. And no one will ever forget the other Sundays—Lake Pleiad, Mt. Abraham, and Mt. Mansfield with the UVM Outing Club, where the Cave of the Winds was thoroughly investigated and many knees were scraped. A smaller number will remember the hilarious overnights to Glen Ellen, and Mt. Killington with Mr. Whitlock along as ostensible chaperon. A new hike this year was the ten-mile trek from Brandon Gap to Middlebury Gap.

In January the Mountain Club sponsored a program by John Jay, official Olympic photographer. Mr. Jay narrated a two-hour color film, "Skis Against Time," covering the 1950 FIS world ski championships at Aspen, and another picture, "White Magic," depicting the world's longest downhill ski run at Jungfrau glacier in the Swiss Alps.

The annual Alpenstock dance, this year with a Swiss Alpine motif, was the sophomore tryouts' rously successful project. The regularly sponsored square dances, held throughout the year, were interspersed with impromptu song fests—the same songs such as the classic "Poor Li'l" that had been heard on the bouncing trucks each Sunday during the fall.

The Woodsman's Holiday was held for the first time this fall. An enthusiastic group of spectators turned out to cheer the contestants on as they sawed and chopped in a race against time. The contestants, from colleges all over the East, were divided into four six-man teams.

Probably the biggest event included in the Mountain Club's calendar is the yearly Middlebury Winter Carnival. Plans for the annual event start in the early spring and worries continue up to the next spring!

Not to be forgotten was the Club's financial aid to a few of Middlebury's top skiers, to help send them on their way to the 1952 Olympic tryouts.

Spring activities included the spring carnival at Breadloaf, a weekend of square-dancing, partying, and hiking. This was open to anyone energetic enough to keep pace with the Mountain Club members.

Hockey

Middlebury hockey forces faced one of the toughest schedules in the country for the 1950-51 season including such teams as Army, St. Lawrence, Clarkson and Dartmouth. However, Coach Duke Nelson, fresh from the football wars, had a squad of veterans, including Captain Forbes, Cronin, Gibson, Bock, Laurer, Rathburn and Guetens plus such promising sophs as Rice, Bob Smith, Hartt, Marshall and Jennings.

The first, and in some ways most notable, triumph for the Panthers came on Jan. 6 when they trounced the West Point Cadets 2-1 with Spider Gibson and Wendy Forbes starring for Midd. Four days later the skaters made it two in a row as they whipped St. Mike's 11-5 on poor ice at Memorial Field House.

Riding the crest of a winning streak Midd took its third win in a row on Jan. 12 at RPI in one of the fastest, roughest, most exciting games of the season. Gibson scored two in the 4-2 win as Midd players spent a total of 46 minutes in the penalty box. A near fight occurred in the last period when the entire RPI squad roared onto the ice after Forbes had shoved the referee in a moment of rage for having called back a Midd goal.

The forward line of Bock, Gibson, Cronin

Following exams the Panthers squared off against Hamilton, beating them 6-5. Embarking on a road trip north the Midd pucksters met St. Lawrence and, with Bill Cronin scoring a spectacular solo, turned back the Larries 3-1.

The following night the skaters met their arch rivals in the new tri-state league, Clarkson Institute, and suffered their 1st loss of the season 7-3 as Clarkson took an early lead of four goals. The loss put Midd and Clarkson in a two way tie for first in the league which is composed of teams from New York, Vermont and Massachusetts.

The Panthers returned to home ground and a victory over Colby 10-5 on Feb. 9 and then humbled Williams 5-2 with Cronin scoring three for the "hat trick." An easy road trip brought two victories over Tufts and MIT, 10-2 and 11-0.

Returning home again Midd turned back the skaters of Norwich 8-6 after the cadets had led 6-5 at the end of two periods. The season's record was now ten wins and one loss.

RPI was the next opponent on the home ice and, in another hotly contested game,
Midd came out ahead 5-2 with Spider Gibson getting the "hat trick".

In the final regular season game Midd knocked off St. Lawrence 3-2 and ended the season with 12 wins and one loss.

However, the most important game of the season was yet to be played. Clarkson and Midd had almost identical records in the tri-state league, the champion of which was eligible for the NCAA playoffs.

On March 5 Middlebury met Clarkson at Lake Placid, but when the smoke had cleared from the rink Clarkson was the decisive winner 16-6. The Golden Knights really had it that night as the Midd defense was unable to keep them from clicking.

In a postseason game the Midd sextet beat out Hamilton 9-4.

The record for the season was fourteen wins against two losses, including the Clarkson playoff. This record was made against some of the top Eastern hockey teams and gives ample proof that hockey at Middlebury has gone "big time".

Bill Cronin, one third of the punch line of Bock, Gibson, and Cronin, has been named captain for the 1952 team which promises to be a top notcher with plenty of veterans on hand to replace those graduating.

Jim Ross sinks a foul shot in the final, thrilling game of the season as Middlebury comes from behind to win. The score: Middlebury 61, Vermont 55

Basketball

A 17-game schedule confronted the hoop forces of Coach Dick Ciccollela as practice started in November. Captain Chet Nightingale headed up a fifteen-man squad which included such stalwarts from last year as Dan Scott, Ralph Loveys, Jim Ross, Joe Miller and Dick Marlette, and a bevy of sophomores up from the freshman team including Bill Wagner, Fred Brooks, Neil Sheehan, Mike Alvaro, George Christian and Bill Fankhauser.

The first encounter with Union was one of those games which no one talks about. Midd lost 80-37 as no one on the team was able to hit the basket with any consistency.

Three more games were lost to St. Lawrence, St. Mike’s and RPI before the Panthers hit the win column with a 54-61 triumph over the hapless horsemen of Norwich. Loveys, Scott and Nightingale were four quarter men in most of these games while the other two positions were more or less filled by Miller, Ross and the top sophomore players, Wagner, Brooks and Christian.

St. Mike’s powerful quintet trampled the Panthers on January 20 but the next two meetings brought the season’s wins to three as a minor upset was scored over Hamilton 42-46 and Champlain, a team which had defeated UVM, was beaten 48-56. By this time Dan Scott, after a slow start, was beginning to climb in the scoring column with 127 points.

Against Vermont, however, Midd couldn’t get going and succumbed 63-53. The team... went into a tailspin after this game, losing to Tufts, Paul Smith's, Williams, Coast Guard and Trinity, finally winning against Norwich on February 21. Bright spots in this losing streak were the 23 points scored by Dan Scott against Coast Guard and the great performance against Trinity which forced this top small college team to fight all the way for its victory.

Following the Norwich win Champlain avenged her earlier defeat by taking the Middmen 60-53 on February 21.

By far the best game of the season, and one which turned a poor record into a good one, was the final tilt against UVM which Midd won 61-55. Dubbed underdogs the home team, after a rather shabby first quarter, pulled up on the Catamounts until they went ahead to win by six points in an exciting finish. Jim Ross and Ralph Loveys, playing their final basketball game for Midd, provided much of the spark which pushed the team on to victory over the traditional rivals.

High scorer for this game was Dan Scott with 17 points including 9 foul shots completed. For the last half of the game Midd had control of the boards most of the time which minimized UVM's scoring opportunities.

The season's record was five wins against twelve losses, a percentage of .31 in games won.

High scorer for the year was Dan Scott for the second season in a row with a total of 230 points in 17 games. He averaged 13 points a game, scored 23 points in two games and hit double figures in all but five contests. Second high scorer was Ralph Loveys with 195 points in 16 games. He averaged 12 points per game and scored 20 points in one tilt.

Captain Nightingale took third scoring honors with 132 and Bill Wagner was fourth with 58.

Two of the big three, Loveys and Nightingale, will be graduating in 1951, but Coach Ciccolella has material coming from a better than average frosh team to fill the gaps in 1952.
WAA Council

It's no wonder that Middlebury women are always described as "wholesome," while such organizations as the WAA are around to keep them in shape.

Over 200 co-eds participated this year in the WAA-sponsored sports of hockey, volleyball, basketball, riding, and lacrosse.

Inter- and intra-mural sports competition make up the bulk of WAA activities, and the lady athletes participate in "play days" with women teams from other colleges in the New England area.

Nearly every WAA member has her eye on the coveted blue blazer, awarded to outstanding athletes by a complicated and rigorous point system.

The association's cabin outside of Ripton is the scene of quiet parties, as most of the girls are usually in training.

If a co-ed is a good sport and wields a mean hockey stick, she rates with the WAA—training ground for future Babe Didriksons.

Men's A.C.

The Men's Athletic Council deals with the organization and management of Middlebury athletics.

The president—Professor Perley Perkins, his colleagues—Coach Brown, Sten Stenson, Phelps Swett. The rest of the Council members are the captains of major sports, and of minor sports in season, and the president of the Men's Undergraduate Association.

At monthly meetings the Council gives opinions on athletic questions, determines Middlebury's general athletic policies, approves elected managers and captains, and gives the final word on the eligibility of athletes who are slated to receive the honored "M" award.
Men's Intramurals

Looking over the various footballs, pictures, and cups on display at the Memorial Field House is a fascinating pastime, and those who ever bother to peruse the cases thoroughly find among these trophies two cups, the Inter-Fraternity Cup and the Trophy of Trophies, holding prominent positions.

These two cups are awarded each year in conjunction with the men's intramural sports, headed by Coach "Red" Kelly and managed this past year by Carl Alexander. All men not on the varsity squads are eligible to participate in this sports program.

The Inter-Fraternity Cup, awarded each spring by Mr. Kelly, goes to the house which has accumulated the most points during the entire season, and which has the greatest percentage of its men participating in the program. This cup, together with the coveted Trophy of Trophies, based on the number of letter men and men out for varsity sports, as well as on intramural results, form two tangible goals towards which each fraternity strives. Chi Psi's holds both cups at the present time, but with such keen competition, will have a hard fight to keep its name engraved at the bottom of the winner's list on these two prized trophies.

Women's Intramurals

Although the men are in the sports limelight here at Midd, the women are by no means mere spectators, as anyone who has seen those distant figures racing around the women's hockey field brandishing hockey sticks, lacrosse sticks, and bats in season will agree. All intramural sports for women are organized and sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association, and include the indoor sports of volleyball and basketball, as well as hockey, lacrosse, and softball.

Any girl wishing to participate may try out for her class team, and is placed according to her ability on either the A or B squad. The four A teams compete with each other, as do the B teams. The final teams are chosen by the manager of the current sport, the team captain, and the Physical Education instructor in that sport.

An added incentive, as women's intramurals receive little attention from the campus in general, is the point system reward, by which each girl on an A team receives 100 points, the B team 60, and, in addition, 150 points is given to each girl on the victorious A team of the season. These points all add up toward that coveted Middlebury jacket, given to any girl who acquires 1,000 points during her four years at Midd.

In most sports during the past few seasons, the present junior class has emerged victorious, causing an even greater rivalry to be built up among the teams to upset this winning streak. In the true sports tradition, this good-natured rivalry succeeds in bringing about closer relations among the women entering into these intramural activities, and each Midd girl is offered the chance to join in and show her "old Midd spirit" too.

In 1946 a group of students, consisting largely of veterans, founded the Flying Panthers. Membership has always been open to anyone with a sincere interest, but with only one plane the number has been limited to a maximum of twenty-five.

At the controls of the Flying Panthers is Dick Macnair, president, with Bob Muller and Joe Borst assisting as secretary and treasurer, respectively. In addition to the club's officers there is also a safety committee, consisting of Steve Terry, Bud Burkewitz and Ed Bovey.

The more enthusiastic members of the club have hoped for a few activities such as breakfast hops and other cross-country trips. Unfortunately, little of this sort of thing has materialized.

One activity of special interest, however, is the participation of the Flying Panthers in a Vermont civil defense airlift practice held last September. Joe Borst represented the Panthers and was one of twenty-seven pilots to fly the course from Montpelier to Lebanon, N. H.

The possibilities of government restrictions, rising costs and other difficulties forecast an uncertain future for the Flying Panthers, perhaps necessitating temporary disbandment in June. It is hoped, however, that in more settled days a new group of students will be stirred by the call of the "wild blue yonder."
A salty crew, the Sailing Club members are some of the most enthusiastic people on campus. The group already owns two boats and is working industriously for a third. The club is the second largest on campus.

The student body battens down the hatches and gets ready for almost anything when the nauticals swing into action. The club met with smooth sailing at various regattas and proved it could hold its own with colleges like Dartmouth, Williams, and Harvard.

Typical of the club's ship-shape efficiency was the Commodore's Ball, which proved to be the high point of Homecoming Weekend. A paper mache' light house, signal flags which said nothing, and the club's two sailboats decorated the Field House to provide the proper nautical atmosphere. It goes without saying that the proceeds were salted away for the future purchase of the eagerly- awaited new boat.

Novice sailors as well as seasoned skippers can find a spot in the Sailing Club, as dry land classes are held for interested beginners who must pass a test before they can take out a boat.

The lure of the dinghies is strong for Midd sailors in the spring and fall when they flock to the local lake, noticeably affected with "Dunmore Fever."
Cross-Country

Although the average football fan doesn't know much about that cruel sport, cross-country, it is an undisputable fact that each fall these strange creatures known as hill-and-dalers represent Midd in the sports world and further, that in 1950 they boasted a neat .500 percentage as they won three meets and lost three.

The runners, who usually cover 4.5 miles during a race and many more during practice sessions, won their first two outings against Paul Smith's and Amherst and a later meet against Champlain while losing to Williams, Union and Vermont. Vermont, by the way, was runner-up in the New England championships.

Captain Peter Perryman, the only senior on the squad, came into his own this year as he took two firsts and a second and scored in every meet. The strength of the team rested mainly in the sophomores up from last year's frosh team headed by Roger May. Captain-elect for 1951 May, in his second year of running, came within 3.5 seconds of cracking the record for the course, 23 minutes 9.5 seconds.

Returning next year, with a break from Uncle Sam, will be May, George Rapp, Joe Peck, Ed Hickcox, Bill Marseilles, Ed Perrin and outstanding prospects from an undefeated freshman team.

The freshmen, who seem to take to this sport easily, get on the squad as the result of trial races run off in physical education classes. The squad had a four meet season with competition against Amherst, Williams, Union, and the University of Vermont. Lead by Tom Beers, with support from men such as Pilcher and Dutton, the team enjoyed an undefeated season.

Board Track

Each year the Middlebury board track team performs before a larger audience than any other Middlebury sport as they compete in the big time track meets held in Boston Garden, and Madison Square Garden.

A four-man team, composed this year of Ray Ablondi, John Mooney, Bill Stotz, and Walt Hollister, with Ace Williams and John Luytjes as alternates, made up the mile relay team, each man running a quarter mile leg.

At the Knights of Columbus Games in Boston on January 20 Midd placed second in a field of five, beating out Amherst, Worcester Tech and Massachusetts. At the Millrose Games in New York, January 27, Midd was third, again beating Amherst. February 3 at the B.A.A. Games in the Boston Garden the Panthers captured second ahead of Amherst and Worcester Tech.

These results speak well for the team, coached by "Coach" Brown since they must practice in the cold air on the board track and then run in the warm, smoke-filled arenas of the cities.

A rough schedule confronted the meager forces of the 1950 Middlebury track squad in the early days of spring practice when it even appeared doubtful that enough men could be gathered to form a team.

After the first meet in which only Captain Meeker and Kracke scored against Williams the future looked pretty bleak. However, in the Quadrangular meet at UVM, Coach Brown’s charges came up with a second place as Meeker broke the UVM record for the 120-yard hurdles, with Dick Daily also placing high; Sherburne took a second in the hundred, Kracke won the discus and Boss, Stotz, and Hollister scored points.

After beating Hamilton behind record running of Meeker and Sherburne, and taking fifth in the Easterns, Midd lost to Trinity and Champlain. The season ended with a second place in the Vermont state meet.

Golf

Duke Nelson's Golf team faced a tough eight-meet schedule with only two lettermen, Marchese and McIlwain, returning. The season's record was two wins and six losses.

After an initial victory against Paul Smith's, Midd was defeated by Amherst, RPI and St. Lawrence in successive meets.

At the New England championships on May 12 Jim Marchese represented Midd but was eliminated in the first round by the golfer who went on to win the championships. After a second victory over Paul Smith's the Panthers lost to Williams and, in the last meet of the season, took second in the Vermont Intercollegiates. It was the first time in four years that Midd has failed to capture the title.

Bill Becker, '52, a standout among the sophomores, is captain-elect for 1951.

Tennis

Only four varsity lettermen, headed by Captain Ken Coleburn, returned in 1950 to form the nucleus of the Midd tennis team. Coached by Bobo Sheehan, better known for his skiing exploits, the netmen for the first time had the use of the inside courts at the Field House for early spring practice. The usual spring weather forced many of the matches inside.

Despite top notch performances by Tuxbury and Truesdale the Panthers lost their first match against RPI. However, the team bounced back to take Paul Smith's 9-0 with Buxby managing to win twelve straight games.

After losing two straight to UVM, Midd took Union 4-5. The third and last win was notched against Champlain 7-2. The season's record was 3 wins, 5 losses.

Lockwood Merriman, English instructor, will replace Bobo as coach in 1951.

LACROSSE

Middlebury’s newest sport, lacrosse, an ancient game of Indian origin, ran off an ambitious schedule in the spring of 1950.

Coaches Curt Cushman and Hal Parker had an enthusiastic though small squad to work with when practice started in the field house with hot water dripping onto the ice underfoot.

The first contest, against R.P.I. jayvees on April 7, resulted in a 7-6 loss, but proved that Midd could field a decent team.

On the 22nd the Panthers met Tufts, but lost 7-2 against a stronger team. Only 14 men were out for the sport at this time and Cushman was contemplating calling up the Frosh as reserves but was unable to do so.

Still lacking depth, the stickmen lost three more tilts to Williams, Union and New England College. Dick Kroeck, Dick Attwill and Captain Guido Tine led Midd in strong fights against these teams.

Finally on May 17, a mark in the win column was registered as the R.P.I. jayvees were humbled 9-3 with Dix and Attwill scoring high. The last game of the season was lost to New England College. Prospects for the 1951 team looked bright with capable men up from the Freshman team.

Shortly after the disappearance of snow and the ending of the basketball season the smack of gloves and the pound of baseballs on the baseball courts herald the opening of another season of the "National Game" at Middlebury College.

The prospects back in March, 1950, looked only fair to Coach Dick Ciccolella as he had lost the services of several star players via graduation or through the lure of the professionals. However, the picture was not too dark with the likes of Jim Newman, Bud Burkewitz and Walt Maurer out early at the Field House, hustling to make the team.

Trinity, the opening game of the 16-game slate, proved a stumbling block as the two teams clashed April 21. Playing at Hartford the Midd men got only two early runs as Midd ace, Jim Newman, was unable to hold the clamps on Trinity and she gathered in 10 runs to win easily.

The following day, however, against Northeastern Bud Burkewitz turned in a neat two-hitter while his mates garnered two runs to give him a victory over the Huskies. A week later the Panthers went against St. Lawrence with Jim Newman on the mound.

Back row: Provoncha, Troy, Giffin, Latimer, Seeley, Whitinghill, Storrs, Miller, Curtis, Paulson, Gibson, Connors (manager)

St. Lawrence was behind for most of the game but managed to squeeze in the tying run in the ninth and the winning marker in the eleventh.

A brighter side of the picture came in early May when the Panthers gathered three quick victories over Champlain, Lowell Tech and St. Mike's with Mike Hunt, Walt Maurer and Ralph Loveys providing the slugging punch. Then after a surprise defeat by Champlain, Union College was humbled 9-6 on the excellent pitching of Jim Newman.

On the 13th at Norwich the cadets went down before a ninth inning rally by the Panthers which saw a walk, an error, singles by Paulson and Forbes, and a timely double by reliable Walt Maurer push across deciding runs in the 8-5 victory.

One of the season's big wins came on the 15th of May when Middlebury downed the mighty Dartmouth Indians at Hanover by a score of 9-5. Young Barrie Storrs held the Indians to seven hits while his mates contributed blows aplenty for the big upset of the year. Later on in the week two more wins were notched against the Purple Knights of St. Michael's and Norwich University.

Middlebury's arch rival, the University of Vermont, trounced the Panthers 4-2 in an exciting contest on the home field May 22. Ace Jim Newman gave up only four hits but was unable to salvage a victory when his mates failed to provide hitting support.

After losing a game to a tough Williams squad Midd again was pitted against UVM with a tie for the state title at stake. Jim Newman, in the last game of his college career, came through with a vital 5-3 victory. Later St. Mike's beat Vermont thus sending Midd into undisputed possession of the state crown.

Thus the 1950 season ended on a note of success. The record for the year was ten wins, five losses, one canceled (Siena). Batting over .300 were Forbes and Shea while Hunt, Masters, O'Neil and Paulson were above the .250 mark.

The pea-green freshmen—It’s all new, wonderful. They’ll never have it so good again.

The gay young sophomores—their individuality beginning to emerge.

The blase juniors—upperclassmen at last—running things, wheels on campus.

The serious seniors—wondering what’s ahead for them, looked up to by all. The class of ’51 coming down the home stretch with four memorable years behind them.
Classes
The Freshman Class

The freshman women exhibited considerable stoicism during the rigors of Hell Week, enduring their punishment for being young and pretty and the cynosure of male eyes.

Freshman men and women cooperated in presenting their class's first of four annual dances to an appreciative student body.

Junior Weekend—the women did their class proud step-singing and the men did likewise in the hard-fought tug-of-war.

"Cinderella" . . . Thanksgiving Eve the sophomore formal was one of the red letter days on the fall social calendar. A high pressure publicity campaign and the crowning of Marilyn Mackie as Cinderella helped to make the affair the success that it was.

Vigilant sophomore women as perpetrators of Hell Week kept their freshman charges well in hand.

The women of '53 broke out their store of tea, cookies, and charm to entertain the faculty at the autumn tea.
Junior weekend, jointly sponsored by the junior men and women, lived up to its reputation this year—with the campus in paroxysms of laughter for an entire weekend.

Serving as "big sisters" to the freshmen, the annual faculty dessert, traditional serenade to the departing senior women were but a few of the events that made 1950-51 the most active yet for the junior women.

The Senior Class

The end of the line for the class of '51. Activities tapered off as both men and women dug in to study for the formidable comprehensive exams.

Anxious to put their liberal arts education to use, feeling regrets at the prospect of leaving Midd (the place sort of grows on you) the Seniors made the most of their last year as undergraduates.

Now in looking forward to the future, to the non-academic life—a different society, four years at Middlebury have been a pleasant prelude.
The Class of 1951

Freshman Week—only a dim memory of rain, receptions, and then, abruptly, classes. Hazing for the men a flop. It's hard to bulldoze a brawny vet into wearing a little blue beanie. Nevertheless, the old "Midd Spirit" was duly absorbed. Then, wham! Our first pre-A's came with a rush. No time out except for mid-morning coffee at the brand new Snack Bar. Midd went modern with 12:30 pers for the women on Saturday nights. First semester ended in a bewildering whirl of fraternity rushing, Christmas vacation, and exams. The big thing second semester was Carnival. Lots of snow but too much "Four-Leaf Clover." Before we knew it spring was here. Junior Weekend. The tug-of-war—the frosh dragged ingloriously through the mud of Porter Pond.

The fall of '48—back together again. Afflicted with sophomore slump but cured just in time for "Evening in Paris." Highlighted by glowing corsages, our first class formal was a huge success. This year we learned what makes the wheels go round on a college campus. Fraternity rushing from the inside; sophomores well represented on Varsity teams, Campus staff, temporary Skyline. February grades better this year. Carnival—no show, wet ice show, musicals, movies. Creeping up on us, June brought the realization that half of our college years were over.

Junior year—upperclassmen at last. No more sophomore slump, but a deluge of pinning. Unlimited cutting. We had weathered two years and the deserving received their laurels: Mortar Board, Blue Key, athletic cups, scholarship awards. Junior weekend, our baby this year. The prom, "in a Little Dutch Garden"—Variety Show with "Piglet" and the Andrews Sisters adding to the hilarity. The year drew to a close with the cane ceremony and Commencement—foretastes of the Senior year.

Senior year—a vista of constant changes. Growing scarcity of veterans, the Korean situation, the Big Wind, the draft blues. It's all gone so fast. So many things we wanted to do and never got around to, so many memories; a few tragedies and a lot of laughs; . . . four wonderful years.

These were Middlebury Events, 1950-1951

These have been our activities, our faculty, our classmates, the senior class of the year 1950-1951. Beginning in September with the sesquicentennial celebration, a milestone in our college history, the year saw changes and expansion—material and abstract—on the Middlebury campus. All classes were affected. The freshmen women, under a new system, moved into the newly built Battells with several junior women as advisers. The freshmen men were also housed in their own dorms and for the first time in years the college students as a whole were living on campus. We expanded still further in January when another new building was completed. We began attending some of our classes in Carr Hall instead of Munroe.

In the fall we began a cut system inaugurated for a trial period by the educational policy committee. A short time later due to the previous semester’s evidence of plagiarism two professors introduced proposals about which many of us were aroused. Protest was to no avail for at the commencement of second semester each student signed a card attesting his knowledge of the definition of plagiarism and of the penalty for such an act.

In our assemblies we continued the previous year’s discussion of a community chest for the entire campus and we saw it successfully enacted and executed.

Comprehensives were scheduled for the coming Spring—the first time since before the war. We seniors began reviewing early for them.

In the end of November we were forced outside of ourselves and our problems when a hurricane struck. We saw others troubled and pitched in to aid them.

We were proud when the father of one of our classmates received the Nobel Prize for his contribution in the field of Medicine. Then later in the year another outstanding senior became the recipient of a Rhodes Scholarship.

The three-week holiday in December meant an unusually long Christmas vacation for us this year. On our return here we found great unrest in all corners of the campus. The time at home had brought us up to date on the distressing state of world affairs and the draft. Rumors were rampant on the number of student enlistments—barring the hundreds. In time, though our awareness of the world crisis did not lessen we were able to sink back somewhat in our accustomed groove. The period provoked questioning—was all the studying necessary, was it worth the effort, just where were we headed?

Heated and extended debate continued through the year on the chapel question—should it be compulsory or voluntary? No two people had the same solution.

We were concerned when driving was suspended for a few days, but then revised rules were found to be more liberal than those before the ban.

At mid-year many of us fell by the wayside as the Deans’ offices recorded 74 failures—the highest number we had ever known.

Our year saw many engagements and pinnings and saw newly married couples living in town.

We tried to procure an ROTC program with the government then later on, an Air ROTC.

In the latter part of the year we became the surprised and grateful recipients of two million dollars from the will of Hetty Green Wilks.

So this has been a year of good times, athletic meets, fraternity parties, school dances, a year of studying, bewilderment, extracurricular activities, and a year of expansion in Middlebury College. This was the year 1950-1951.
... and These Were World Events, 1950-1951

The events, associations, and people of Middlebury College have been presented in the 1951 Kaleidoscope. Although Middlebury is located in the Green Mountains, events in the outside world concern us. 1950-51 was a year of crisis in the world.

There was continued tension between the United States and the Soviet Union. In June, 1950, North Korean forces crossed the 38th parallel and moved south. The United Nations called for troops from its members to resist this aggression and the United States replied with large forces. United Nations troops were pushed back to within 30 miles of the port of Pusan before a counter attack could be successfully executed. UN troops then advanced to the region of the Yalu River in the far north of Korea when the Chinese Communist forces entered the war and proceeded to drive southward. This drive was stopped just south of Seoul and fighting continued in central Korea.

Fighting was also taking place in other parts of the world, notably Indo-China and Tibet.

A great debate was raging in the United States over what our foreign policy should be. Herbert Hoover suggested that we concentrate on the defense of the Western Hemisphere, making the Atlantic and Pacific an impenetrable moat and letting the rest of the world fare for itself. Major policy makers who replied to this proposal were Governor Dewey, Senator Taft, John Foster Dulles, and President Truman.

As the United States prepared for defense the draft was increased, reserves were recalled, and price and wage controls established. General Eisenhower was named the Supreme Commander of Western defense armies in Europe. The development of jet fighters and atomic bombs continued and construction of an atomic powered submarine was started.

International tension prevailed throughout 1950-51. We were all concerned over whether or not we would become personally involved in the conflict between Communism and the Western world.
In Acknowledgment

As the end of work on the 1951 Kaleidoscope draws near, the staff pauses to remember the pleasant contacts and new acquaintances acquired through this job.

For the efforts of each of the following, which were deeply appreciated, may we extend a sincere thanks:

Peter Gurwit and Dorothy Britton of the Jahn & Ollier Engraving Company for their technical advice.

Arthur Gray, Murray Eisner, and Jack Sharin of Donbar Studio for their excellent photographic work.

Paul A. Nelson and Mr. Walker of the Durand Manufacturing Company for the cover execution.

Gove Studio, the College News Bureau, Warren Case, John Smith, Alan Gussow for photographic work.

Henry Prickitt for assistance with the financial phase.

Sandy Bowser, Jack Sacher, Bill Trask, Joyce Greene, and Martha Jane O'Brien for helping out in our last minute rush.

Mrs. Samuel Jewett and Mr. Charles Boise for their early morning friendliness.

Bruce and Betsy Guillon for being such good neighbors.

The Campus for letting us use their offices and phone.

Stewart Jamieson for assistance with a variety of work.

Henry for his unfailing good humor.

FOOD SERVICE EQUIPMENT FOR 1975

We know that the reason Middlebury College recently purchased Thompson-built Stainless Steel Ford Service Equipment for their kitchen, was due to the fact that a quarter of a century from now the equipment will still be new-looking, giving efficient trouble-free service day after day.

For fifty years, Thompson's name has been a synonym of quality in Food Service Equipment. Modern metal working machinery and an advance manufacturing technique assured the production of equipment unsurpassed, permanent, sanitary, efficient, plus attractive appearance.
